PRINGS FREE FROM CRIME DURING 1913

any Arrests, but Largely Due to Traffic Ordinance Violations

[illegible] Springs was freer from crime in 1913 than it has been for several years although the first murder [illegible] three years occurred and several [illegible]. The number of burglaries and [illegible] of importance was materially smaller than it has been for several years and the work of the police shown by comparing the number of [illegible] in 1912 and 1913. In 1912, approximately 1,600 arrests were made while during the last year, 2,630 offenders or alleged offenders were taken into custody by the police.

"We were extremely lucky in 1913," said Chief of Police Burno yesterday. "We only had one series of burglaries that amounted to anything and that was soon cleared up by the arrest of a man and his wife who are now serving sentences in prison. We had the first murder in nearly three years but the murderer killed himself after he had killed another so that left the matter in the hands of the coroner.

"The great number of arrests is due largely to the enforcement of ordinances. We have paid much attention to the enforcement of the speed and motor vehicle ordinances and this has swelled the number of arrests to its unusual size."

Out of the 2,630 arrests made, only 50 were for crimes of larcenous nature. These were divided as follows, burglary [illegible], forgery 9, embezzlement 2, grand larceny 30. There were two murders during the year. 404 drunks and 321 [illegible] were arrested.

Police Clerk Matthews is now at work on the annual report of the police department which will probably be ready in about 10 days. Practically all the [illegible] to be included in the report has been compiled.

SHIP BREAKS IN TWO; CREW LOST

OIL TANKER OKLAHOMA TOTAL WRECK

Rescue Vessel Brings Few of Crew to Shore; Captain Tells the Story

NEW YORK, Jan. 5. The oil tank steamer Oklahoma broke in two amidships without warning at 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning south of Sandy Hook and a large number of her crew of some 40 men perished.

The stern section, in which was situated all the heavy machinery of the vessel, and on which there were 32 members of the crew, sank immediately. Eight members of the crew were rescued by the Hamburg-American line steamer Bavaria, whose captain, says some of the Oklahoma's men told him they saw an open boat put away from the wreck with eight men in it.

This information was contained in a wireless dispatch received tonight by the Hamburg-American line here from Captain Graalfs of the steamer Bavaria, which is proceeding to Boston with the eight survivors of the tanker on board. The message, which came by way of Sis[illegible], said.

Captain Tells Story.

"On January 5 at 6 a. m. we sighted signals of distress of a vessel. The seas were high and rough. At dawn we saw the forepart of a steamer floating on the water. It was the tank steamer Oklahoma from New York.

"At 8 a. m., we were close to the wreck and lowered a boat with six men who succeeded, after great effort, in seizing a rope that was thrown to them from the Oklahoma. The men of the Oklahoma lowered themselves into the boat, exhausted by their experience of the last 24 hours.

"Captain Gunther stated that last Sunday at 7:30 a. m., during heavy weather and without any previous warning, the ship suddenly broke in two behind the bridge. In about 20 minutes the after part of the ship, with 32 of the crew, sank the stern pointed upward with the propeller [illegible]. The fore part [illegible] kept afloat, with the bulkhead [illegible] up to the [illegible] protruding from the water. CURRENCY BOARD BEGINS HEARINGS

FIRST SITTING IS HELD IN NEW YORK

Big Bankers Give Their Ideas on Establishment of Regional Bank

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The task of setting up the machinery which is to put in motion the new banking system of the country was taken up here today by the federal reserve organization committee, consisting of Secretary McAdoo of the treasury department and Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture. On this committee devolves the responsibility of mapping out the regional reserve districts and locating a bank in each. To aid it in reaching its decision, the committee today began a series of hearings which will be continued three days more in New York and subsequently in other important financial centers of the country.

A number of New York's leading financiers gave their opinions on the subject today. Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, said he thought the committee would find it impossible to work out a plan that would fulfill all requirements.

Presents Hard Problem.

"It presents almost an insolvable problem," said Secretary McAdoo, when Mr. Vanderlip had been given his opportunity to speak upon the manner in which the regional reserve districts should be drawn up.

"I think that is what you are facing," said Mr. Vanderlip. "Oversight and control spell the whole story of this law. If we get the proper oversight and control, the law will work in spite of its defects. If we do not it will not work."

A majority opinion of the witnesses favored the creation in New York of a regional bank of such magnitude that it would absorb 40 to 50 per cent of the $106,000,000 capital available for the entire system of the country. Such a district would include New York, New England, New Jersey, Delaware and part of Pennsylvania.

Bank of Huge Size.

Secretary McAdoo suggested that such a huge bank here would overshadow the other regional banks, of which, according to the law, there must be at least seven. The reply was made that a bank of such size was needed here in order that it might

BRYAN SAYS WILSON IS RESPONSIBLE FOR NEW ERA IN NATION

Praises New Currency Bill and Income-Tax Feature of Tariff

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 5.—William J. Bryan, secretary of state, was the principal speaker at a Democratic state banquet here tonight. His topic was "The New Era."

Secretary Bryan called attention to a remark credited to J. P. Morgan when the question of dissolving large corporations was agitated a few years ago, and when Mr. Morgan asked,

"Can you unscramble eggs?"

It was Mr. Morgan's firm, the secretary said, that took the first steps toward actually "unscrambling the eggs," by the action taken three days ago, when Morgan directors withdrew from 27 corporations.

Referring to Mr. Morgan's statement that "conditions were now favorable to carry out the ideas which we have had in mind for some time," Mr. Bryan said, the president was the man to thank for spurring the big business men into carrying out the ideas they had had in mind.

Antitrust Laws Next.

"The next stage in this new era is to carry out the antitrust law," Mr. Bryan said. "The president has been so busy with the work that has just been completed that he has not yet formulated the details of this movement. But I have heard him say a 'private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable.' The president's use of English is so concise and accurate that I feel justified in saying that if it is indefensible he will not defend it, and if it is intolerable he will not tolerate it."

Mr. Bryan called attention to the fact that the country had adjusted itself without excitement or commotion to the income tax law, even men with large incomes having in many cases expressed approval of the tax.

Of the currency bill, he said:

"The advantages conferred upon the banks are greater than those conferred by any former law, and yet these advantages were conferred under restrictions and limitations that protect the public. The law recognizes the [illegible] right of the government to issue money and the right of the people to control, through their public officials, the exercise of the [illegible] privileges."

CATSKILL, N. Y., Jan. 5.—"General" Rosalie Jones' suffrage army arrived here at 8:45 o'clock tonight from Kingston with the leader stumbling along with blistered feet and on the verge of collapse. Miss Jones had to be carried into the hotel parlor. She recovered quickly, however, and announced that her army would continue its march on the state capital tomorrow. They plan to reach Albany Wednesday noon.

PARCEL POST WINS OUT OVER EXPRESS COMPANY

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 5.—Uncle Sam's parcel post won a victory today over the Wells-Fargo Express company when the state board of control ordered automobile license plates sent hereafter by the former route. The express company formerly charged a rate of 50 cents per plate, but later reduced it to 35 cents. The parcel post affords an average rate of 20 cents, and this the state has accepted. California automobile owners will save $25,000 annually.

CLOSE UP ALL TOWNS VIOLATING THE LAW, GOV. WEST'S PLANS

COPPERFIELD, Ore., Jan. 5.—Copperfield is still under martial law, after an exciting day in which all the liquors and fixtures of the saloons closed by Governor West's order were boxed and shipped away, in spite of court injunctions served upon Colonel Lawson, the governor's representative. Accompanying the fixtures was a quantity of gambling paraphernalia, including three roulette wheels and a "monte" layout.

Colonel Lawson and 12 militiamen accompanied the shipment to Baker, the county seat, while Captain Metcalfe remained behind with 10 men to continue the enforcement of martial law.

Mayor H. A. Stewart and the deposed members of the city council were told they could leave town if they wished. The mayor and Councilman Wiegand left for Baker with the announced intention of taking legal action to regain their offices.

HUNTINGTON, Ore., Jan. 5.—Col. B. K. Lawson arrived here tonight and announced that he would declare martial law tomorrow and close the saloons here. Ten militiamen from Copperfield are with Colonel Lawson.

Colonel Lawson said that after "cleaning up Huntington" he would go to Baker, where it had been reported to him by the governor conditions needed attention. That martial law might be proclaimed at Baker also was Colonel Lawson's statement.

F. A. Bubb, mayor of Huntington, when told of the intention to declare martial law in Huntington, said he would not oppose Governor West, but would do everything in his power to assist the military authorities in compelling enforcement of saloon regulations.

COLORADO TO PROFIT BY BIG LUMBER DEAL

Railroad Connecting This State With Northwest Arizona Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. Sale of a billion feet of timber from the Kaibab national forest in northern Arizona, with authority for the construction by the purchasers of 200 miles of railroad through one of the richest sections of the west, was approved today by Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture. Bids will be received up to the middle of June, this year; then three years will be allowed the contractors for building the railway. The timber will be cut gradually over a period of 25 years.

This project is the most gigantic launched by the forestry service since its creation. So carefully have the service officials mapped out their plans that by the end of the contract period the land, which was first bared by the cutting, will have been reforested by a new growth and the scenic beauty will remain unmarred.

Colorado Will Profit by Deal.

Recognizing the difficulties which lie in the limited transportation facilities, the service decided that the contractors should be allowed to construct a railroad connecting Colorado and Utah with the grand canon, which heretofore has been accessible only by the southern approaches. For several years the construction of such a road has been considered by capital but it has been [illegible] that the lack of a [illegible] traffic proved an effectual barrier.

It was pointed out at the department today that a contract for a billion feet of timber will overcome this difficulty and provide a commodity for transportation which, with the tourist and local traffic included, will place the project on a paying basis.

Chief Forester Henry S. Graves, who made a personal examination of the Kaibab reservation, announced today that the market of the matured timber will not be allowed to mar the scenic beauty of the forest considered one of the most beautiful in America. The annual cut will be less than 40,000,000 feet.

SIR LIONEL CARDEN TO BE TRANSFERRED FROM MEXICO CITY

Change Due to His Opposition to President Wilson's Mexican Policy

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Officials of the foreign office were not prepared this evening to discuss Sir Lionel Carden's transfer from Mexico City and were surprised to discover that the intentions of the government had leaked out. It is generally understood, however, that the government takes much the same view as the public, that the minister has not been entirely discreet in handling the situation in Mexico, although the government does not believe that he has done anything to justify the very severe criticism leveled against him.

Nothing has become public here as to any differences between the American naval authorities in Mexican waters and Sir Christopher Cradock, the admiral in command of the British warships there.

When it was suggested tonight to the American ambassador, Walter H. Page, that the ambassador might have had something to do with Sir Lionel Carden's transfer, he declined to admit responsibility, but suggested that Sir Lionel himself may have been the agency.

That the transfer was not a surprise to the ambassador, was indicated by the fact that he volunteered the name of the minister's successor saying that he understood Charles Murray Marling was to take the post. Mr. Page denied that he had visited the British foreign office in connection with the rumors regarding Sir Christopher Cradock.

Washington Pleased.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Announcement that Great Britain is to transfer Sir Lionel Carden, its minister at the City of Mexico, was regarded by officials [illegible] Washington as a substantial [illegible] of the purpose of the British government to remove every obstruction to the execution of the plans of President Wilson for dealing with the Mexican situation.

At the state department it was denied that protest had been made by the United States to the British foreign office against any of the acts or utterances ascribed to Minister Carden. [illegible] other sources, however, it was [illegible] that Ambassador Page had [illegible] About the time [illegible] a similar official statement was [illegible] in London repudiating a statement attributed to Sir Lionel that President Wilson's policy towards Mexico would not have been adopted had he not been in ignorance of the facts.

Take Hopeful View.

Officials here expect the transfer of the British minister, in view of the lack of sympathy he is said to have shown with the American line of action to have a beneficial effect in impressing the Huerta government with the fact that there is to be no division among the powers from which it might expect to profit.

Regarding the renewal of rebel activity in the neighborhood of Tampico a cablegram from Rear Admiral Fletcher received late today, though dated Saturday, said it was feared another attack was to be made upon the town. In anticipation of the trouble, the German cruiser Bremen has gone from Vera Cruz to Tampico.

From the west coast, Captain Bradshaw of the gunboat Yorktown, which was sent to Ensenada on a report that the foreigners there were threatened with a forced loan, reported today that

WEALTHY FRISCOANS COME TO AID OF THE CITY'S UNEMPLOYED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—Plans for raising $50,000 by private contribution were perfected today at a meeting of the Citizens Relief committee, formed to take up the question of providing for the city's unemployed. Men of wealth have pledged themselves to raise this sum.

In order to prevent an invasion as occurred a few days ago, when the municipality announced that all idle men would be given employment and San Francisco quickly became the mecca for the unemployed within a radius of a thousand miles all those seeking work are to be registered and those having families here will be given preference.

Steps also were taken to provide for unemployed women. It is estimated that 1,000 working women are without positions.

More than 4,000 meals were served today at a municipal dining room in Folsom street. Representing the faction which yesterday decided upon a boycott of free meals, two pickets stood guard outside, but apparently without effect. The unemployed who decided upon the boycott say they do not want charity, but an opportunity of earning a livelihood.

Joseph F. Greenwood, a member of the official committee of the unemployed, who negotiated with city officials for caring for the men without work, and was arrested on a charge of theft of table silverware preferred by the superintendent of the Cooperative Employment bureau, was sentenced today to 30 days in the county jail.

HOSTILITIES AT OJINAGA CEASE

REBELS ARE AWAITING REINFORCEMENTS

Federals May Become Aggressors When the Battle Is Resumed

MARFA, Tex., Jan. 5.—Hostilities between the northern division of the Mexican federal army defending the fort at Ojinaga, Mexico, opposite Presidio, and General Ortega's 6,000 rebels today ceased as suddenly as they began a week ago. Without any federal activity to provoke his move, General Ortega withdrew all his troops seven miles westward along the Rio Grande, supposedly to await the arrival of reinforcements from Chihuahua.

Information also had reached the rebels that a large body of federals which had been on the way from Jiminez under command of General Argumedo were within four days march of Ojinaga and were planning to steal upon Ortega's rear and rescue the federal garrison with its half a score of generals who were driven from the interior to the border.

Ortega Withdraws Army.

Although both armies after six days of fighting had been resting since daylight and not a shot had been fired since then General Ortega suddenly divided his army into three formations and in the blue haze which was hanging over the valley from previous battles, started to move along the border away from Ojinaga.

General Pascual Orozco, commander of federal volunteers, who was sent out to scout, reported that the rebels evidently had taken up a position to await more forces.

General Ortega's departure was regarded by the federal garrison as indicating that both armies will delay further fighting until both of them have been strengthened.

Should large numbers of federals arrive from the interior, it was believed, a battle on a larger scale will ensue with a prospect that the federals will attempt to do more than defend their position.

Federals May Press Fight.

General Francisco Castro, commander of the federal regular troops expressed confidence that if he is joined by General Argumedo, as is expected from Mexico City, he [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] ward.

So long as federals remain along the border in great number, General Castro said, Villa's rebel army will be

UNIVERSAL PEACE IDEA IS GROWING

MOVEMENT GIVEN GREAT BOOST LATELY

Large Bankers Refuse to Finance War Programs of Powers in Europe

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—An international standardization of bookkeeping to secure a census of the world for the purpose of equitable representation at The Hague peace tribunal on a basis of population is the purpose of a meeting of nations in Brussels, Belgium, next October, Roger W. Babson of the executive committee of the American Statistical association announced here today. The ultimate purpose of the meeting which Mr. Babson said was called at the instance of a European power is disarmament and world peace.

The Brussels meeting is to be called at a session of the American committee of the statistical association in Boston, February 28. Representatives of 12 foreign powers have agreed to attend this session, he said.

Nations Favor Plan.

The conference had its real inception in the refusal of the European banking houses to finance the war budgets of the powers. The work of The Hague conference has been incomplete heretofore because of the dissatisfaction of the great nations with the system of uniform representation voted into effect by the small powers. The new system of representation will make the conference a greater power.

According to Mr. Babson the purpose of eventual disarmament and world peace is distinctly in the minds of the American committee, the European power referred to and of the other nations all of which are aware of what is projected and are in accord with it.

Competition in Peace.

"Nothing less than world community and world cooperation are in the minds of the nations promoting this stock taking," Mr. Babson said. "Competition between the nations will be preserved, but it will be competition in the arts of peace.

"The clock is about to strike on the era of the battleships.

"This conference had its real inception in the refusal of the great European banking houses further to finance the immense war budgets of the powers. France is at a deadlock with her bankers over the proposed 1,300,000,000

NO ACTION BY GOVERNOR ON DEPORTATIONS

Said to Favor Acts of Militia at Trinidad in Strike Case

'MOTHER' JONES TO RETURN

Says She Does Not Fear "Whole State Militia;" Federal Probe Urged

DENVER, Jan. 5.—Mother Jones tonight had completed arrangements to leave for Trinidad, whence she was deported Sunday night by military authorities, either tomorrow or the day following. No threat that Adjutant General Chase had made concerning her imprisonment incommunicado had made any apparent impression upon her and she insisted that she would "return to my boys in spite of the whole state militia."

Governor Ammons today took no action toward investigation of the deportation of Mother Jones or other union leaders from the strike districts in Colorado during last week. It was understood tonight from recent conversations and lack of action today that the governor approves of the summary action taken by the commander of the state troops in not allowing her to stop at Trinidad. The governor frequently had been heard to characterize the "angel of the camp" as a most undesirable presence in any strike region and to state that it would be far better for her to remain out of Colorado during the present labor difficulties.

It was understood that union officials and strikers of Trinidad and Walsenburg had promised "Mother" Jones all the armed protection she would need upon her arrival at either place.

Trinidad Again Quiet.

TRINIDAD, Jan. 5.—Everything is quiet in this part of the strike zone, a company of [illegible] leaving here today for Oak Creek, in Routt county.

John Lawson and the investigating committee that has been here for the past week left tonight for La Veta, where they will continue their investigations.

Federal Probe Urged.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Labor forces pressing congress for an inquiry into the Michigan and Colorado strikes today renewed their activities claiming that the establishment of martial law in either state threatened conditions as seriously as that which recently obtained in West Virginia.

Senator Borah's report as to the operation of martial law in West Virginia was declared to strengthen the demands for a congressional inquiry as presented by Representatives Keating of Colorado and MacDonald of Michigan. HUERTA RESIGNATION REPORT IS REVIVED

Provisional President Would Take the Field Against Rebel Forces

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 5.—That General Huerta intends to resign the presidency of Mexico in the near future—a rumor often denied by him in the most emphatic terms—is again being persistently reported in the capital. It is said that he will take the field in person against the rebels after yielding the presidential office. Enrique Gerostieto, minister of justice, will be selected as his successor, according to the understanding.

Senor Gerostieto has asked that he be relieved of his portfolio, which is regarded as lending color to the report of which confirmation has been impossible so far. Gerostieto is said to have been offered the portfolio of foreign affairs succeeding Querido Mohano with the understanding that he assume the presidency and has consented to the plan only on condition that the deputies imprisoned by Huerta upon the dissolution of congress last October, be set at liberty. He had many friends among the deputies and has never been in sympathy with General Huerta's treatment of them.

General Trevino Then Succeeds.

Under the alleged plan Senor Gerostieto is to hold the presidency only for a limited period turning it over to General Geronimo Trevino of Monterey, one of the oldest of the army officers, who on previous occasions has been talked of as a possible successor to Huerta, and to whom, if is urged, Washington could have no objection. General Trevino was the friend and trusted officer of Porfirio Diaz. Until recently he was chief of the military zone of which Monterey was the headquarters, and he kept aloof from the present development of the last three

UPRISING AGAINST THE HAYTIAN GOVERNMENT

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Dispatches from Cape Haytien received here early today report a formidable uprising against the Haytian government. Villiere and Tron, in the north, and other centers are said to be in arms, protesting against the official candidates for the elections on January 10.

Trouble has been brewing in Hayti for some months. Reports from Port Au Prince recently have indicated that a revolution against the administration of President Orestes was imminent and that the president whenever he appeared in public was surrounded by a heavy guard.

WOMAN'S HAIR REACHES TO KNEES

A Year Ago Was Threatened With Baldness Tells How She Made Her Hair Grow.

Mrs. Esther Emery now visiting friends in the city is the fortunate possessor of marvelously beautiful hair, which, when loosened from its coils, falls to her knees. Moreover, it is of soft, silky and fluffy texture and in color a glorious glossy gold. Yet, just one year ago she was threatened with baldness. Urged to tell how she had obtained this wonderful growth in so short a time, she said. "Had anyone told me such marvelous results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. Twelve months ago my hair, which then reached barely to my shoulders, was falling out at an alarming rate and growing very thin, actually exposing the bald scalp in several spots. It was dull and lifeless in color, turning gray in patches and very dry and brittle. My head was covered with dandruff and itched like mad all the time. I tried fully a dozen different hair tonics but they were all the same, and never did me a bit of good. One day I chanced to read in my home paper of a simple home prescription to make the hair grow that was recommended by a well-known physician. It said that by taking ordinary Lavona de Composee and mixing with Bay Rum and Menthol crystals and applying to the scalp each night with the finger tips, that new hair would grow very rapidly. I decided to try it and I had my druggist mix 2 oz. of the Lavona de Composee with 6 oz. of Bay Rum and ½ drachm of Menthol Crystals, and started to use it. My, how quickly my hair did grow. First the hair stopped falling, the itching ceased and the dandruff disappeared. Then tiny little hairs appeared all over my scalp. These grew and grew as though nothing would ever stop them. They are growing yet, and while, of course, I have used the treatment steadily and expect to continue it at least until my hair reaches the floor, I might have stopped and been perfectly satisfied at the end of three months. I [illegible] any woman can get long, [illegible] hair by using this prescription [illegible] I have recommended it to [illegible] and all are delighted [illegible]. command the respect of European bankers and hold its own with the great individual banks in New York.

Establishment of a large [illegible] in New York was advocated by Francis L. Hine, president of the Chase National bank; Walter Frew, president of the Corn Exchange bank; Charles A. Conant, financial expert; A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National bank; Alexander J. Hamphill, president of the Guaranty Trust company; James G. Cannon, president of the Fouth National bank, and others.

Vanderlip's Idea

Mr Vanderlip's idea was that the importance and influence of the New York banks would give them such a position that it was of comparatively little importance how much territory outside the metropolitan district was included.

Dr. H. Parker Willis of New York who was adviser of the banking and currency committee of the house of representatives during the time the currency bill was before it, was the chief opponent of the plan for the creation of a huge bank here. Dr Willis expressed the opinion that each of the regional banks should be strong and self-supporting, and said that to allot to the New York district 40 or 50 per cent of the working capital of the system would be out of harmony with the purpose of the law.

"There are no unmistakable considerations," he said, "which dictate that one bank should be vastly superior in powers. The capital of the banks is relatively a matter of minor importance."

Secretary McAdoo asked the opinions of the witnesses as to what cities other than New York should be chosen for regional reserve banks. The common opinion was that if the New York area be restricted to the immediate vicinity, banks would be established in the east in Boston and Philadelphia or Washington. Other cities referred to most frequently were Chicago, St Louis, San Francisco, Cleveland or Cincinnati, Denver and Atlanta.

Witnesses testified they saw Sweeney raise the window of his hotel room and jump. His wife is said to be critically ill in Denver, and reports of her condition affected his mind.

the situation there has been much relieved by the arrival of the Yorktown, though so far he had had no consultation with the American consul on account of the state of the arms.

Sir Lionel Not Informed.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 5. Sir Lionel Carden had not been advised of his intended transfer to Brazil when the news was conveyed to him today by the Associated Press. He expressed doubt as to the authenticity of the announcement, on the ground that the appointment of a new minister to Mexico would constitute a reaffirmation of the recognition of President Huerta by Great Britain, which he appeared to regard as a course it was doubtful his government would pursue.

Brazil, the minister explained, was his original appointment. He had been offered the choice of Mexico and Brazil and chose the latter, but was persuaded to come to Mexico temporarily, because of his knowledge of the country and people. He thought it possible that his transfer if that were to take place might be intended as a step calculated to conciliate Washington.

Opposes Wilson Policy.

It is no secret that Sir Lionel Carden's ideas, since he came here six months ago, have been at variance with President Wilson's policy of nonrecognition of Mexico. He did not hesitate openly to express his opposition. On the occasion of John Lind's last visit to the capital the president's representative and the British minister had several long conferences, after which Mr. Lind said their views with respect to the treatment of the Mexican question were widely divergent.

Sir Lionel regards as far from hopeless the ultimate domination of the situation by General Huerta. It was ridiculous to suppose, he said, that a country as rich as Mexico was now reduced to financial straits. There were thousands of wealthy Mexicans who had contributed nothing to the pacification of the country and who could and should be reached. The expense of carrying on the war appeared to him only nominal as compared to the country's resources.

"The British people, rich and poor, he continued, "were compelled to stand the cost of the Boer war. Why then should not wealthy Mexicans be obliged to contribute to the cost of putting down the rebellion?" He believed that when the administration was convinced of the impossibility of obtaining loans for carrying on the war, it would find little difficulty in financing it at once.

President Wilson Has Nothing to Say.

PASS CHRISTIAN, Miss., Jan. 5.—President Wilson tonight read with interest press dispatches announcing that Sir Lionel Carden, the British minister to Mexico, would be transferred to Brazil. The president, however, had no comment to make. It is known, however, that he had no advance information concerning the transfer.

The president played golf as usual this morning, but omitted afternoon exercise, spending his time indoors.

franc loan. The bankers have said that they might as well go out of business if it is within the power of the government to order them to sell those bonds before they sell anything else.

Bankers Say "No."

"Germany plans to increase her standing army to 700,000 from 500,000. France plans to increase hers from 400,000 to 600,000. It cannot be done, the bankers say.

"Hitherto the work of The Hague conference has been incomplete because of the dissatisfaction of the great nations with the system of uniform representation which was voted into effect by the small powers. Germany last year withdrew from The Hague conference because of this.

"I can say from personal information and upon the highest authority that this program of international stock taking with a view to world peace is going through.

"All the great nations know what is contemplated and all favor it. Germany would not take the initiative because it is incompatible with Germany's position at present to take the stand that she has had enough of competition in building armies and battleships. But Germany is ready to come in if some other nation will start it."

Unemployed Spurn Rock Pile Wages

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 5.—Portland's attempt to solve the unemployed problem by providing a municipal rock pile with a flat wage rate of $1.50 a day, failed utterly today. Out of 500 men who have been given free sleeping quarters 50 applied for work, but only 12 reported at the rock pile. Seven of the latter quit within the first hour.

Two hundred men stormed the city council chamber and demanded information as to wages and hours at the rock pile. When told that only $1.50 would be paid for a full day's work, they jeered in chorus and withdrew.

[illegible] IN TWO; CREW LOST

[illegible] after the Bavaria reached the scene of the disaster, the [illegible] the United Fruit steamer Tenadores arrived, but there was nothing left to be done, the Bavaria having [illegible] work took place in latitude 38.07 north, longitude 73.48 west.

Shortly after this message had been received by the Hamburg-American line, another came from Captain Graalfs. This said:

"According to statements made by some of the men saved, a boat from the stern part of the Oklahoma, with from eight to ten men in it, was seen. Its whereabouts is not known."

Captain Cates Lost.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—Capt. Loring A. Cates of Boston, who was a passenger on the tank steamer Oklahoma which was abandoned in a sinking condition off Sandy Hook yesterday, was not among the rescued on the steamer Bavaria, according to a radio message received here tonight from Captain Graalfs.

Captain Cates was well known in Boston and for some time commanded the oil tank steamer Ligonier, plying between Port Arthur, Tex., and Beverly. He lived in Dorchester with his wife and two sons.

The Bavaria is expected to reach Boston about noon tomorrow. None of the four steamers which were in the vicinity of the wreck and which came into port this afternoon made any report concerning the lifeboat spoken of by the men on the Oklahoma.

Captain Porter of the fruiter Tenadores and Captain Bonet of the Manuel Calvo, both of whose vessels stood by the Oklahoma, said tonight on their arrival here that they had no knowledge of what caused the accident. They confirmed the statement of Captain Graalfs that the Oklahoma had broken in two amidships, and expressed the opinion that few of the crew who were aft at the time had any chance to reach the forepart of the vessel.

Explosion Suggested.

"From the fact that all the survivors were assembled forward," said Captain Porter, "I presume that an explosion took place in the afterpart of the ship, where all the working force in the engineer's department were quartered.

"Here also were the ship's engines and other machinery. The accident must have been of a sudden nature, for otherwise the men aft would have had ample time to have saved their lives by rushing to the forepart of the steamer."

The Calvo, which was the first vessel to arrive at the scene of the disaster, was 57 miles south of Scotland lightship where a lookout saw what appeared to be a derelict off the port bow. This was Sunday afternoon. The Calvo's course was changed and when she got close to the derelict eight men could be seen on board. Captain Bonet called for volunteers to man a lifeboat for the rescue. Six men responded, but when the boat was lowered, a huge wave smashed it against the side of the ship. Three of the men were badly injured. They were brought into port tonight in the ship's hospital.

Tango Is so Modest It Bores Woman to Tears

LONDON, Jan. 5.—A special matinee performance given today at a London theater for the edification of peeresses and church dignitaries who recently expressed disapproval of the tango, resulted in giving practically a clean bill of modesty for the much-discussed dance.

Duchesses, countesses and bishops in large numbers were invited, but they, whether present or not, did not advertise their identity.

The result of a vote taken among the audience was 731 to 21 in favor of the modesty of the tango. One guest wrote on her card that the dance was "so modest it bored her to tears."

GOV. FERRIS IN CALUMET STRIKE FIELD

partment of labor was here last week," said O. N. Hilton, chief of counsel of the federation. "We went as far as we could towards finding some way by which the striking miners might return to work. Now it is distinctly up to the companies. If the governor can obtain from them a definite proposition which we can consider without humiliating ourselves, then there may be some chance for success of his mission."

The company pronouncements were less definite but they agreed that the visit of the state executive might be productive of considerable good. The operators express confidence in Governor Ferris' ability to "size up" the situation, and express the belief that no harm could come to their interests by a thorough inquiry into the strike.

Fifth Investigation.

The governor's visit will constitute the fifth investigation of the difficulty. Walter Palmer and John B. Moffit of the department of labor made inquiries into the initial aspects of the strike and John J. Murphy of Detroit visited the district last August at the request of the governor. The fourth official visitor was Mr. Densmore, who failed to find a solution of the situation last week.

Despite this multiplicity of inquiries every possible avenue of information will be opened afresh for the governor. It was thought likely, however, that he would pay particular attention to the Moyer-Tannar deportation, the progress which the grand jury has made towards clearing up cases of lawlessness and the activities of the Citizens alliance. The methods of imported mine guards and special mine police may also attract the governor's attention.

In this last connection it was noticed tonight that an exodus of private policemen had begun. John T. Vickery took 40 of these men back to New York tonight.

Moyer Leaves Hospital.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, left the hospital today and took up his headquarters in a hotel where it was planned to hold a meeting of the executive board of the federation tomorrow. Charles E. Mahoney, vice president, Guy A. Miller and Yanco Turzich, board members, arrived today and spent the evening in consultation with the federation president.

None would discuss tonight reports that a general strike in Michigan might be called. Earlier in the day it was reported that a meeting of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor would be held in Washington at which the copper strike will be considered will be called by Samuel Gompers, president of the organization.

This was learned by Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, here today. He was asked concerning rumors that an attempt would be made to call a nationwide strike in sympathy with the Michigan and Colorado miners.

Up to A. F. of L., Says Moyer.

"Any such demand must be made on the American Federation of Labor," he replied, apparently choosing his words carefully. "If any such a thing is considered it would be considered by that body."

"Have you asked for a nationwide strike?" he was asked.

"There has been considerable pressure exerted that such a demand be made. However, it may be said that our plans are in statu quo. I will confer tomorrow with Charles E. Mahoney, vice president of our federation; Guy A. Miller and Yanco Terzich, members of the executive boards, and we will determine what further action to take now that Mr. Densmore has been unable to negotiate a peace plan and the governor of Michigan is about to make a personal investigation. Mr. Mahoney is due here at 8 o'clock tonight and it is doubtful if we can do more than have an informal chat at that time."

Moyer will leave the hospital this afternoon, but his physicians have ordered him to rest quietly in his hotel for another week.

DENVER, Jan. 5.—In spite of the reticence of other Western Federation of Miners officials, Ernest Mills, the secretary-treasurer, tonight insisted that much pressure had been brought to bear upon the officers of the federation to apply to the American Federation of Labor for a nationwide strike of metal workers in sympathy with the Michigan copper miners' strike. Secretary Mills also believed that the United Mine Workers of America, now on strike in Colorado, would assist the federation.

STRIKE ON AT HAMILTON-BROWNSHOE CO. PLANTS

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 5. Members of the United Shoe Workers union late today declared a strike against the Hamilton-Brown factories and sent pickets to each factory with instructions to attempt to prevent all shoe workers from joining the Boot and Shoe Workers union. C. P. Dean, organizer for the United Shoe Workers union, estimated that 1,000 members of the union and 1,000 nonunion men had been refused employment at the factories.

DE ORO DEFEATS MORIN IN NATIONAL BILLIARD MEET

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Alfred De Oro of New York, the title holder, defeated Charles Morin of Chicago tonight in the first block of the play for the national three-cushion billiard championship, 50 to 43. The play went 75 innings and each player had a high run of three. Their second block will be played tomorrow night.

rules committee, it was said, practically are identical to those revealed in the Borah report.

Senator Borah's report, submitted by him as a member of the committee which conducted the investigation in West Virginia, held that the military authorities had taken over the prerogatives of the civil courts before it had been proven that the latter were not capable of handling the situation.

It was said tonight that many members of congress favor the inauguration of an investigation into the Michigan and Colorado strikes at once. It is expected that resolutions will be offered in the senate as soon as that body reconvenes next Monday.

TRINIDAD, Jan. 5.—A special train bearing Captain Dorn and company C, Second regiment of infantry, left here today for the northern strike fields, and before their departure were given a farewell escort by the troops now in camp here.

The trades assembly here today adopted a resolution denouncing the organization of the Routt County Taxpayers league and their recent attempt to drive union organizers from the northern district. Sheriff Chivington of Routt county came in for much of the condemnation of the trades assembly.

The deportation of "Mother" Jones yesterday by state troops also was bitterly denounced by the assembly.

open to a rear attack because the federals have recuperated from much of the disorder which attended their flight from Chihuahua City, and have gathered courage from the failure of the rebels so far to take Ojinaga.

As soon as the rebel forces had cleared from sight the federals wandered over the battlefield to pick up the wounded. The dead were burned and after dark fires dotting the landscape showed where the killing had been heaviest.

Women Refugees Return.

Some of the women refugees who had taken shelter on the American side returned to Ojinaga.

Colonel Cruz Rosa and two rebel captains, taken prisoners with an automobile load of ammunition from Chihuahua were executed in the plaza at noon. The federals have several hundred prisoners captured in various skirmishes.

The removal, at least temporarily, of so much fighting within a mile of Presidio, caused great relief to the United States border patrol under Major McNamee, and the Red Cross officials who have been made to bear the burden of caring for the [illegible] wounded from both armies.

No definite view was obtainable as to whether General Ortega, in withdrawing, was to attempt some surprise to be executed at once or intended merely to await reinforcements, however long that might take.

Villa Nearing Ojinaga.

JUAREZ, Mexico, [illegible] Gen. Francisco Villa, commander-in-chief of rebel forces in Chihuahua, will join his forces near Ojinaga some time tomorrow morning, it was announced at Juarez military headquarters tonight. He wired to Juarez early this morning from a point along the route to Ojinaga that he had left the railroad and would make the remainder of the journey in his high-powered automobile.

With the arrival of General Villa near Ojinaga, Juarez officials said tonight that the retreat of their forces would be turned into a charge, and that the attack will be resumed immediately. Villa will not await the rebel reinforcements under Gen. Monclovio Herrera, en route to Ojinaga but will proceed to Ojinaga ahead of them.

Ammunition was sent in large quantities from Juarez today to the rebel forces near Ojinaga. Part of the consignment was shipped by railroad via Chihuahua, and another shipment was carried by rebel troops which left Juarez today for the front.

Carranza Going to Juarez.

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 5.—A message received here today by Mexican Consul Eduardo de la Sierra, said that Gen. Venustiano Carranza, commander-in-chief of the Mexican rebels, arrived this morning at Nogales, Sonora, and from there went by automobile to Benson, Ariz., where he boarded a train for El Paso and Juarez. It said that General Carranza was traveling in disguise and was due to reach Juarez tomorrow morning.

Officers at Juarez denied these reports, saying that altough General Carranza intends to come to Juarez within a few days, he will make the journey through Mexican territory.

Traveling in Disguise.

NOGALES, Sonora, Jan. 5.—It was rumored here today that Gen. Venustiano Carranza had passed through here in disguise this morning, en route to El Paso, but Constitutionalists were not inclined to believe the report. Dispatches from Hermosillo during the day gave no indication of the departure of the Constitutionalist chief.

O HELP THE SOIL BACTERIA

[illegible] Aeration and Crop Rotation [illegible] Little W[illegible] to [illegible]

L. McArthur in an Idaho agricultural [illegible] bulletin.

[illegible] practically all bacteria and investigators [illegible] that the greatest number of bacteria [illegible] found at [illegible] few [illegible] face of the soil. [illegible] they gradually diminish [illegible] until at a depth of five [illegible] six feet very few bacteria are found. There are a number of factors which [illegible] to influence the variation in number of bacteria at different depths. The farther they are from the surface the less air they get and this is probably one of the best reasons why they are not found at any great depths. In a sandy soil large numbers of bacteria are usually found at a greater depth than in a fine clay soil, probably due to the fact that they are carried there by the drainage water. A cultivated soil usually contains greater numbers of bacteria and at a greater depth than uncultivated soil, probably due to the fact that the cultivation gives the bacteria more air and a chance to increase their numbers. [illegible] also tends to stop the growth and activity of unfavorable bacteria, and to increase the growth of favorable bacteria.

It is thought that the rotation of crops increases the number of bacteria in the soil a great deal more than continuous cropping. The addition of manure also increases the number of bacteria and their activity. An acid or sour soil does not usually contain as large a number of desirable bacteria as a soil that is neutral or slightly alkaline. Thus the addition of lime to an acid soil corrects the acidity and increases the number of bacteria present.

TACOMA HAVING LABOR TROUBLES

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 5.—Normal operations at the Tacoma smelter, upon which a strike was precipitated New Years day, are expected to be resumed within two or three days, according to W. R. Rust, president of the smelter company. President Rust said between 300 and 400 men were now working in the plant.

"As soon as the peace officers can keep the streets clear of strikers and pickets, so as not to intimidate our skilled workers, things will be going as usual," he added.

Tomorrow may bring the climax of the situation. [illegible] Rackler, chairman of the strikers' committee, said any attempt of deputies to escort skilled workmen through the lines would be resisted.

"We do not want trouble," said Rackler, "but if the sheriff's men or the company's guards menacingly display firearms, we will be ready for them."

Strikers and pickets were noticeably absent [illegible] Ruston streets tonight. This was attributed to the orders of Rackler, issued after three of the strikers had been arrested by deputies for carrying concealed weapons.

NO 10-MINUTE-A-DAY WIFE

A Writer in Collier's [illegible] With [illegible] Milholland Boissevain.

From Collier's Weekly.

Feminism by all means only that doesn't commit one to accepting every statement advanced by Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain. Take her remark the other day about ten minutes in every 24 hours being enough for "keeping house." Now, ten minutes may do in a Manhattan apartment house, where babies are against the law, but who calls running a Manhattan apartment "housekeeping?" In our town there are no uniformed hall-boys to fall back on; no speaking tubes or dumb waiters or "maid service included" in the lease. One cannot have breakfast brought to one's bed for the asking; some time, somehow, that breakfast has to be cooked. The housekeeper in our town is a homemaker. She has mending to do and [illegible] letter writing or preparing a club paper on H. G. Wells to [illegible] a "hurried place" and make it well. Mrs. Inez's flippancy about ten minutes a day doing for keeping house is a crying injustice to the best, the most efficient, the most lovable of all "feminists." It isn't even on a par with the [illegible] "three Ks" ineptitude—Kirk, Kitchen and Kids. We should live divided between a very present fear of ptomaine poisoning and a recurrent dread of death by slow starvation—if our were a 10-minute-a-day wife.

REP. KEATING URGES INVESTIGATION OF OAK CREEK AFFAIR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Immediate investigation of the charge that Harry Ratliff, superintendent of federal forests [illegible] at Steamboat Springs, Colo., led a mob that took strikers out of jail and deported them, was demanded today by Representative Keating of Colorado.

Immediately on receipt of a telegram charging that Ratliff led the crowd, Mr Keating arranged for a conference with Chief Forester Graves and got in communication with Acting Secretary Galloway of the department of agriculture. Keating demanded that if the charges be sustained Ratliff be removed.

Telegrams received by Representative Keating and other members of the Colorado delegation regarding the deportation of "Mother" Jones and others active in the coal strike would be submitted to congress in support of the bill for a thorough congressional investigation into all phases of the strike.

Representative Keating later discussed the situation with Chief Forester Graves, who assured him that he would immediately investigate the alleged activity of Ratliff. Mr Keating declared "Mother" Jones undoubtedly would go back immediately to the scene of her deportation.

Studying Deportations.

DENVER, Jan. 5.—Preparation of affidavits in connection with the alleged deportation of several strikers from the Oak Creek coal district in Routt county in northwestern Colorado were begun today by representatives of the United Mine Workers of America. Officials at union headquarters here stated that these affidavits would be forwarded to Washington to be used in urging a congressional investigation into the Colorado coal strike.

Advices received today by E. L. Doyle, secretary-treasurer of district 15, United Mine Workers of America, were that quiet prevailed in the Oak Creek district where last week several strikers were ordered to leave by the taxpayers league which also issued a notice that every able bodied man in the country "must secure employment or leave."

Union officials were busy today considering action in connection with the refusal of the military authorities to permit "Mother" Jones to stop in Trinidad yesterday. Up to 11 o'clock today no definite course had been decided upon.

TRINIDAD, Jan. 5.—The military commission, which has not been in session since December 22, convened here this morning to consider evidence in a number of cases growing out of the strike. Minor strike matters occupied the attention of the commission today.

Three hundred coke ovens at Tercio and a similar number at Tabasco were fired this morning for the first time since the coal strike was called on September 23. Ten strikers at Ludlow are reported to have left the tent colony. They were given work at Berwind.

The special train, bearing company G, Second infantry Colorado National guard in command of Captain Ralph Dorn, ordered yesterday to the Routt county coal fields will not leave here until this afternoon.

Interview Miss Illington? No, Just Chat With Her

Talented Actress Loves to Talk About Characters but Not Herself

Margaret Illington, the actress, is one person. But Margaret Illington, the woman, is quite another. And a most delightful other.

Between the third and fourth acts of "Within the Law" Miss Illington is not compelled to change costume. It is one of the moments during the play she is at liberty. And so she agreed to receive the writer in her dressing room. It was intended to be an interview. Instead it was a most delightful and informal little chat.

MARGARET ILLINGTON

As She Appears as Mary Turner in Within the Law

"You want an interview. You want me to say something startling, I know. But I hate startling things," she laughingly declared as she brushed a pile of what-nots from a trunk and offered a seat. "Let's just have a little talk—just about anything and everything."

And [illegible] just as [illegible] been pictured [illegible].

Miss Illington is a charming woman. Witty, well informed [illegible]. [illegible] a delight [illegible]. And she [illegible] with enthusiasm. On stage she [illegible] to the eyes; off stage she compels a good hearty laugh. Her [illegible] are catching and [illegible] pleasure to meet her and [illegible] informally.

Propped up on a trunk clicking his heels together, the interviewer started to "get" his interview. But it proved to be a case of the interviewer being interviewed.

Deep subjects would be tiresome now," Miss Illington insisted. And quickly continued:

"Oh, I would like to play Agnes Lynch in 'Within the Law.' Don't you think it would be grand? So much fun could be gotten out of the part. Every line is a laugh—and I would laugh, too." And she undoubtedly would.

Plays Part Naturally.

"But I love Mary Turner. She's so real. And you know we find it so much easier when you don't have to make yourself live the part. Why I just live Mary Turner naturally. I think she's a fine character.

"But Maggie Schultz is my favorite. I don't think I will ever play a part so real as Maggie Schultz in 'Kindling.' Don't you think she was grand?" But assent was on the tip of the tongue before the question had been completed.

"But now I'm talking about myself. And I didn't mean to do that."

The interviewer insisted she wasn't, that she was talking of Mary Turner and Maggie Schultz. But it was of no avail. Not a word more about Miss Illington. And but a few moments remained before the curtain would be up for the last act. It seemed as if the actress had won.

Praises Producer.

"I do wish you would say something about Mr Selwyn. He deserves so much credit for producing 'Within the Law.' Why, when he got the play it had just failed in Chicago. Things certainly looked black. But he had a great faith in it. He decided to spare no time or expense to make it a great production. He told me to choose my cast regardless of expense, to secure the most capable cast I could find. And don't you think he has succeeded admirably? Oh, I do."

"Do you think Mary Turner is your best character?" the interviewer asked, still hopeful.

But only a peculiar little smile formed the answer.

And then came the call for the fourth act.

Interview? No chance! But it was a most pleasing chat.

And Miss Illington unconsciously showed her secret of holding an audience.—F. R. W.

JUDGE J. H. M'LEARY DIES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—James H. McLeary, associate justice of the supreme court of Porto Rico, died here today after an illness of several months. He came to Washington last fall to visit his son, Lieutenant Samuel H. McLeary, U. S. A., and he was prepared to return to Porto Rico when taken ill.

Justice McLeary was a native of Tennessee, but when a young man went to Texas where he practiced law and was elected to the state legislature and later attorney general of the state.

The body will be buried at Arlington national cemetery with Masonic and military honors on Wednesday.

Earl Moore Is Charged With Forging Checks

Alleged to have forged checks amounting to $50 on local merchants, Earl Moore, 23, of this city, was arrested last night by Captain Stark of the police department. Moore is being held at the city jail. Charges probably will be preferred against him today by Clarence W. Whitehead, one of the alleged victims.

Bad checks were first circulated shortly before Christmas, but the police were unable to secure anything on the case. Four checks, aggregating $39.60, were passed. Several days ago, Whitehead says, Moore cashed a check for $10 at his cigar store. When Moore was told the check had been returned he took no steps to cover it, according to the story told the police. Whitehead took up the matter with the authorities last night and Moore's arrest followed.

THE FOLLY OF GENERAL STRIKES

THE report that labor leaders are about to meet in Chicago to consider calling a nation-wide sympathetic strike in support of the Michigan and Colorado miners will be received with scant sympathy throughout the country. Such a strike could accomplish no good whatever and it would inflict incalculable harm. It would result in the loss of many lives and inflict property and business losses running high into the millions. It would engender a spirit of bitterness which would increase rather than diminish the difficulties now in the way of settling the present conflicts. The situations in Colorado and Michigan are bad enough as they stand and they would only be made worse by creating a new train of evils.

It is hard to believe that any body of labor leaders who possess the slightest appreciation of their responsibilities could persuade themselves to bring such a calamity to the country. Commercial and industrial conditions are none too good at the present time, and a general strike would unquestionably be the one thing needed to precipitate a disaster which would engulf both labor and capital.

HUERTA IS SATISFIED

DISPATCHES from Mexico reveal Dictator Huerta in a very complacent state of mind. Despite all the irritation which President Wilson's policy has caused in the past, he is now well satisfied. As one of his officials puts it, "The best Mexico can expect of Washington is to be let alone to work out its own problems." Mr. Lind has returned to Vera Cruz to resume his easy task of watching the march of events from the standpoint of an interested but inactive onlooker.

President Wilson makes an occasional speech in which he calls Huerta a variety of polite but disagreeable names - and lets it go at that. Secretary Bryan prattles harmlessly of the near approach of the day of universal peace. Thus the administration policy, if it can be termed such, is a course of doing nothing in the easiest and most ineffective manner. Its aim is to deprive Huerta of financial support by withholding recognition and thus gradually to weaken him to such an extent that the Constitutionalists will eventually capture Mexico City and drive him from power.

Apparently this program will succeed, for events are tending in that direction. But what is to be the final outcome? Villa, now the chief leader of the rebels, has been uniformly successful in his recent campaign. He is supreme throughout the northern part of the republic, and declares that he can take Mexico City whenever he chooses. If the reports are trustworthy this is probably true, and when the event occurs it will mark the culmination of the Wilson policy of non-interference. But it will not mark the end of the Mexican complication; indeed, it will signalize the beginning of a new era of anarchy compared to which the Huerta regime will seem a beneficent rule.

Huerta is a dictator and has played the role consistently. But at least he must be credited with adhering to the outward forms of civilized warfare. His standards are low, but they are the best that obtain in Mexico. But his probable successor, Villa, is merely a bandit. His vocation for years prior to the outbreak of the revolution was that of an outlaw, the leader of a band of highwaymen, robbers and murderers. His methods from the beginning of his present campaign have been characterized by unspeakable ferocity. Woe to the hapless captives who fall into his hands, for he does not merely shoot them, as is the usual Mexican custom, but he subjects them to torture and to outrages which would disgrace an Apache chieftain. Seemingly trustworthy accounts reveal him as a human monster of the most brutal type.

Yet this is the man who, according to the logic of the present events, is likely [illegible] to replace Huerta as Mexican dictator. Carranza, until recently the head of [illegible], has now dropped into second [illegible] if Huerta is deposed will have to [illegible] It is easy to understand Mr. Wilson's [illegible]. He is a lover of peace and he is anxious to restore order according to constitutional forms. His program might have worked out to a satisfactory conclusion if there existed in Mexico a responsible opposition led by men who could be depended on, in the event of their victory, to establish a just and stable government. But no such opposition as this exists. Villa is the representative leader of the rebels, and his accession to the presidency would mean exchanging a dictator for something infinitely worse. Neither the United States nor any other foreign government could or would recognize him. If it is now desirable to oust Huerta it would be imperatively necessary to depose Villa, and that would mean armed intervention.

The first ten months of the Wilson administration have been marked by many triumphs of which the President may well be proud. But his Mexican diplomacy is not one of them.

AVIATION UP TO DATE

IN San Francisco the other day, Lincoln Beachey, an aviator, turned seven somersaults in the air in one flight. It is scarcely a month since this trick was first done by a French aviator; now it is commonplace. Beachey has done it forty-three times. He flies with the machine upside down, turned sidewise, pointed straight up or straight down, or in any other position. And now that one aviator has shown that it can be done, anybody can do it.

The progress of aviation in recent years has not been as satisfactory as might have been expected after the early beginnings. When the Wrights first demonstrated that a heavier-than-air machine could be driven by a skilled operator for long distances with a fair degree of safety and under varying weather conditions, it was assumed that the machine would soon become of practical commercial value. Postmaster-General Hitchcock went so far as to secure a small appropriation for the establishment of experimental air routes for the delivery of mail. That was more than two years ago, but no mail is yet delivered by aeroplane because the risks involved are too great.

European armies and navies have spent large sums on their aero fleets and have demonstrated the unquestioned value of the craft for scouting and other military purposes. But neither in Europe nor America has anything of real value been accomplished to show that the aeroplane is a thing of commercial utility.

Such feats as have recently been performed by Beachey and one or two other aviators turning somersaults, flying upside down, etc. -are interesting just now chiefly because they are spectacular, but the knowledge thus acquired may be turned to practical account later insofar as it will enable the operators to gain more complete control over their craft. If the aeroplane can be made reasonably safe under all conditions of wind and weather it should soon become an extremely useful means for carrying mail, light merchandise and passengers. At present, however, this development has not been attained, and it is still valuable chiefly as a means of giving sensational exhibitions.

MUNICIPAL COAL MINE.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

This city could make no mistake in going into the coal mining business. The opposition comes from those who are making big money by selling coal at the present price. One operator said that the coal companies lose a large amount of money by extending credit. The city would sell for cash only and would lose nothing.

Kansas City gets the bulk of its coal from the Lexington district. This coal is mined by union labor, and after a freight rate is paid of 55 cents per ton it is delivered to the consumer in Kansas City at from $3.25 to $3.75 per ton, the prevailing price being $3.50. The operators get from $1.75 to $2.00 per ton f. o. b. at mines, and some of them have become millionaires at the above prices. The local operators advanced the miners' wages 20 cents per ton and the price to the public $1.50 per ton. Let us have a municipal mine and sell lump coal for $3.00 and make money.

A VICTIM.

Colorado Springs, Jan. 5, 1914.

THE PRICE OF EGGS.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Just a word in the Open Parliament on the much discussed egg question.

There is no money in eggs at 50 cents per dozen for the man who produces them.

The cold storage system of the country we hear so strongly criticized is one of the greatest blessings we have when it is rightly handled.

Fifty cents is big money for the storage egg, but no man can produce the "yesterlaid" egg at that price and make any profit.

Anyone really producing that kind of an article would much rather his hens could go to sleep in the fall, like the groundhog, and wake up on February 2, he would save at least three months when the income from eggs will not pay the feed bills.

Colorado Springs will never get cheaper eggs than she now gets, 25 to 30 cents in summer and 50 to 60 cents in winter, and I have always found her willing to pay that for the real thing.

But she could always be sure of a strictly fresh nonfertile egg if the farmers of El Paso county were educated to produce them, as Mr. Rauck and Mr. Cottrell are teaching them to build silos and produce [illegible] off their [illegible] in one and.

[illegible] EDWARDS.

Colorado Springs, Jan. [illegible] 1914.

OPEN VS CLOSED SHOP.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

Why is it that so many people who pretend to be fair-minded [illegible] or do not discriminate between the purposes of [illegible] or unions which are organized to [illegible] and better conditions for [illegible] of corporations [illegible] solely for [illegible]. Does any honest or unprejudiced man or woman really believe that mechanics or unskilled laborers are getting too much compensation for their labor? If the answer is in the negative, how are they going to secure fair wages and good conditions except through organization? Cannot anyone see that fair treatment can only be secured through the so-called "closed shop?" The "open shop" means that selfish corporations [illegible] unorganized workingmen from enforced economic necessity or otherwise, can render abortive all efforts for a just division of the products of labor. If such competition is carried far enough, the consequence is more poverty, more crime, more starvation and continued involuntary addition to the already overwhelming army of the unemployed. That's what the "open shop" means, and that is its inevitable outcome. There can be no [illegible] weight of wages [illegible] scales and in labor unions organized solely for self-protection against combined capitalistic greed. State law doesn't protect them; their own [illegible] measurably do it at least [illegible].

O. [illegible].

Colorado Springs, Jan. 5, 1914.

FROM OTHER PENS

[illegible] STAND BY VINCENT.

From the [illegible].

The political pulse of the state during the past week has given much attention to the speech of Hon. Merle D. Vincent of [illegible] before the Progressive party in Colorado Springs a week ago Tuesday night. The burden of his address was the latest phases of the present coal strike conditions, and during the course of his remarks Mr. Vincent publicly demanded that Governor Ammons adopt a method within his power to terminate the existing situation.

Staunch supporters of the governor seem unable to find language strong enough to clothe their denunciation of this daring criticism, while those of opposite political faith are equally enthusiastic about patting our townsman on the back and complimenting him for his bold assertions. Those who know the man know that there is not a particle of "bluff" in his makeup and that he is not one to make such demands without some reasonable hope of their prompt enforcement.

From the Hotchkiss Times.

Since Merle D. Vincent made his demands of Governor Ammons at a Progressive banquet in Colorado Springs last week, the standpat press has been taking him to task rather vigorously. We do not agree with the Hon. Merle D. on the strike situation, but as he is a taxpayer of the state, we are going to allow him to demand of the governor all he pleases. And, further, we believe as a citizen of the state, he has a right to his demands as much as the coal operators have to own the governor.

THEY'LL GET THE SAME.

From the Ault Advertiser.

The Republicans (of all kinds) got together a few days ago in New York to decide what they are going to do to be saved—next year. Before the meeting opened those of the Cummins-Hadley variety, who insist on trying to reform the standpat crowd, were profuse in their promises of what they were going to do to Bill Barnes, but when the session was over Barnes had done it to them. It will be just so with the compromisers in Denver and elsewhere when they get through with regenerating Archie Stevenson, Tom Devine and Charles W. Waterman.

"Hisr" and Some Other Much Needed Words

BY RUTH CAMERON

In these days, when philanthropy is the fashion, we have all sorts of givers, all sorts of gifts and all sorts of beneficiaries. It would be rather hard for a philanthropist who liked originality to find a new outlet for his generosity.

And yet I have one more suggestion.

I wish some generous philanthropist would present the English language with a synonym for the word "thing." I should be grateful to him all the days of my life. I cannot estimate how much time and trouble it would save men, and I fancy anyone who has much occasion to express himself in writing would join me in thanking such a benefactor. The only synonyms which my thesaurus gives are "object" and "article." As you can readily see, these cover about one-tenth of the meaning of "thing."

Of course, it must be partly because I do not know how to use it, but the English language certainly seems to me to be lamentably weak in several spots.

Indeed, there can be no question but that it is weak and poor in comparison with some other languages. Japanese, for instance. A Japanese boy, who was learning the English language, could scarcely believe there was but one word for "I." In his language there were eight.

And not only does the English language lack synonyms, but there are many things for which it has no single word at all. For instance, what single word in the English language expresses "person one is talking with?" "Person one is walking with" is also lacking. "Companion" has to weakly cover both these words.

I believe it is supposed to be an affectation to use semi-French words such as "ennui" and "fiance," but what is one to do when the English gives us no exact synonym? Of course, the Frenchman invented "ennui" and would naturally have a patent on the word, but he certainly didn't invent engaged couples, and I don't see why we shouldn't have a word of our own to take the place of the word "fiance." To be sure betrothed means engaged, but I cannot imagine anyone introducing Mr. So-and-So as "my betrothed." And yet why shouldn't we? After all, it is our fault instead of the fault of the language this time, for "betrothed" is really a rather sweet word and might well take the place of "fiance" if we would only use our own instead of borrowing.

Again, I don't see why we shouldn't have a recognized contraction of "am not." Why not authorize "ain't" (for use with the first person singular alone, of course) if no other bridge across the difficulty is possible.

But if I could have only a single word added to the English language it wouldn't be any of these, but one, the lack of which has caused writers more difficulty than all the rest combined. Surely you can guess what it is. A singular of "they," that is a common pronoun meaning either he or she. I have heard "hisr" suggested for the possessive of such a word, but I want a nominative, possessive and objective. Think of the valuable [illegible] words would save us. Can't some noble benefactor confer a blessing upon the billion or so English speaking people by presenting the English language with this new word?

[illegible] take [illegible] well in [illegible] settled [illegible] exorbitant prices for [illegible].

There's one [illegible] about this going to church: Many of those who attended church Sunday had to keep their heads wrapped in cold towels yesterday.

The morning after church is not like some mornings after.

Senator Borah scores the methods used for the settlement of the West Virginia strike. But does he have a remedy for strikes? And has he a plan of settlement? If so, now is a good time to propose it in congress.

President Huerta, it is said, is greatly pleased that President Wilson is to continue in Mexico the "hands off" policy. It will permit an indefinite extension of [illegible] his tenure.

After all, it seems, those Mexican federals at Ojinaga had one more fight left in them.

It's to the credit of the people of Colorado Springs that at last the Sunday orchestra concerts of the Colorado Springs Musical club are self-sustaining.

That half-wit who was sent to the penitentiary ought not to ask long for a pardon. But he should be put into some school where his poor, fuddled brain can be given such development as it is capable of receiving.

With Bristow, the Republican, and Murdock, the Progressive candidate, for the United States senate in Kansas, there's bound to be a lively campaign to the east of us this summer. And Murdock doesn't often come out second best.

"Denver girls," says the esteemed News, "are models of refined taste in selection of gowns." Evidently, then, there's a new definition of refined, not in our Webster.

Delta county farmers have replied to the edict of the Grand Junction factory that the price paid for beets will be 25 cents lower this year. They'll grow alfalfa instead of beets, they say.

Will the Colorado Springs Gazette be kind enough to inform a waiting public how and in what manner a special session of the legislature would affect the coal strike?—Fort Collins Courier.

See the letter of Merle D. Vincent to Governor Ammons.

The Fort Collins Courier says union recognition is unamerican. Any more unamerican than the slaughter of those farmers in the Vulcan mine at Newcastle, who tried to take the place of experienced miners?

And still people are being held up in Denver at night.—Boulder Herald.

If night-time hold-ups were the only ones perpetrated in Denver, that city would have but little cause for complaint.

Of the 10 members of the executive committee in charge of the fight against the Denver water company, five are members of the Progressive party.

We were inclined to think the opponents of the Denver water company ordinance were in the right, but when former Mayor Speer likewise opposes the ordinance our faith wavers somewhat.

And now Massachusetts reports an increase of nearly $129,000,000 in the value of goods manufactured in that state during 1913, which marks a new high level.—Baltimore Sun.

More proof of that panic the Republicans are hopefully predicting.

It is a rare piece of important legislation that nowadays leaves congress without some "rider" directed against the civil service law.—New York Evening Post.

With the full sanction, thus far, of the esteemed Post's own president, Woodrow Wilson, aforetime vice president of the National Civil Service Reform league.

Senator Root says the younger men must come to the front and take hold. Des Moines Register and Leader.

They have come to the front in the Progressive party.

Senator Bristow of Kansas is having an awful time trying to decide whether he is a Republican or Progressive. And his peace of mind isn't ministered unto by the announcement that, if he runs as a Republican, Victor Murdock will be a candidate against him as a Progressive.

The New York Tribune is pleading, with tearful eyes, that Republicans there show signs of a regenerated heart by selecting a Progressive Republican as speaker of the assembly. But without any sign, as yet, of yielding on the part of Boss Barnes.

Secretary Lane's proposal to "conserve" deposits of radium is interesting in a two-fold way. It is an illustration of the unexpected ramifications which a new policy is apt to develop, and its favorable reception is fresh evidence of the rapidity with which the public has accepted the principle underlying it. —New York Evening Post.

What! Has not the raucous yell of defiance from our governor penetrated as yet to the effete east?

Boulder is going to vote soon on the question of a municipal light plant. And friends of municipal ownership, led by Mayor Armstrong, say they're going to win.

For a week there were no arrests in Fort Collins. They were all trying on their New Years resolutions.

The municipal coal mine committee of Colorado Springs finds that it would cost $100,000 to open a mine; that it costs $1.75 a ton to produce coal, and 95 cents a ton to deliver it; and that there is a profit of 20 cents per ton.—Fountain Herald.

Evidently there was one finding for Fountain, another for Colo. Springs.

Parcel Post Wins Big Victory, Says Burleson

By Gilson Gardner in the Denver Express

WASHINGTON.—The first test of our new parcel post in handling the great Christmas "rush" is a great success! It has filled Postmaster General Burleson with complete gratification.

"It has proved a tremendous success," declared Burleson to me. "While all the actual figures are not at hand and, of course, cannot be compiled for some weeks, we have been in constant touch by wire with every section of the country and have reports from various departments which show without any doubt that our government as a carrier of packages for the people has established a system which meets every requirement.

"The big test of a system like this comes in such a time of rush as the Christmas season. We have met that test!

Kept Moving.

"The mail kept moving; delays have been only slight. Wired reports show we had only 10 per cent of unworked mail as compared with last year. The ordinary mail was not delayed at all. In some small places in the south and to a some extent in New York, mail was delayed a few hours, but that was worked out right away."

"How did the departmental service compare with that of the express companies, Postmaster General?" I asked.

"That is a very interesting point. I am glad you asked," Burleson replied. "The express companies were watching to see what we would do. I won't say they would have rejoiced at our failure, but I have my own guess as to that. You probably noticed the story which made its appearance on the 19th of December, to the effect that there was congestion in the mails and that there would be serious delay. This was telegraphed all over the middle west. There was not a vestige of truth in it, and I should judge the only possible purpose was to divert as many parcels as possible to the express companies. We denied the story at the time. There was not, at that time or afterward, any serious delay anywhere in the country. We put on about 6,000 additional people temporarily to help handle the Christmas rush. That is the usual number put on at the Christmas season. This time our employes worked with wonderful efficiency, for the amount of mail handled this Christmas was immensely greater than at any previous time in the history of the post-office."

RAILROAD IS NEEDED TO YUKON VALLEY, ALASKA

The estimated value of the gold produced in the Alaska portion of the Yukon basin in 1912, was $8,646,000, compared with $9,050,000 in 1911. This decrease is due to the falling off of the output from the Fairbanks and Hot Springs districts, for the other Yukon camps either held their own or somewhat increased their output compared with the preceding year.

The Fairbanks district continues to be the largest producer of placer gold in the Yukon country. It can not maintain this position long, however, without a radical change in mining conditions which will make it possible to exploit profitably its extensive bodies of low grade placers. But little has been accomplished in this direction, and the best hope of the future lies in obtaining direct railway connection with tidewater.

COLLEGE ROMANCE ENDS IN MARRIAGE YESTERDAY NOON

Charles Carson, Nephew of William Jennings Bryan, Weds Miss Carrie Burger; Graduated Last June

Culminating a romance begun three years ago on the Colorado college campus which continued through their graduation from the institution last June, Charles Evalett Carson, Jr., of Kissimmee, Fla., and Miss Carrie Burger were married yesterday noon at Idaho Springs. President William F. Slocum of Colorado college officiated and a large number of college people from Colorado Springs attended.

Young Carson is a nephew of Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan and also a nephew of United States Senator Nathan P. Bryan of Florida. He took a prominent part in college activities, being a member of the debating team, manager of the class play last June, a member of the Apollonian club and the Delta Phi Theta fraternity. He attended Colorado college three years.

His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Burger of Idaho Springs and attended Colorado college four years, being president of the girls student government association last year. The couple will make their home in Florida where the groom has large citrus interests.

M'CLURE NOT COMING HERE; CLARK LECTURES INSTEAD

S. S. McClure, the famous editor and writer, whose appearance at Colorado college, scheduled for December 9, was postponed indefinitely, probably will not lecture in Colorado Springs this year. When he postponed his address here, Mr. McClure stated he probably would come to this city between January 6 and 11. He is in London at present, and as no word has been received from him by college officials, it is thought he has been unable to find a date upon which he can appear here.

The next series in the English course at the college will be furnished by Professor Clark of the University of Chicago, whose dramatic readings here during the last several years have created much favorable comment. Professor Clark will make his first appearance January 30. He will address the vesper services at the college February 1 and will give readings February 2 and 3. All of his readings will be from Shakespeare, with one exception, when he will recite "Vanity Fair."

Finish Testimony on Coal Costs Tonight

The municipal coal mine investigating commission probably will complete the taking of testimony at a session to be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the council chamber at the city hall. No outline of the matters to be considered at tonight's meeting was made at last week's session, but it is thought that all remaining testimony can be received and filed. The commission then will start the work of working over its findings and drawing up its final report to the city council.

Stratton Independence Company Has "Scout" Engineers at Work at Cripple Creek

Directors of the Stratton Independence Mining company at a recent meeting in London, decided to pass their regular half-yearly dividend of $80,171 and devote the money to exploring other properties in the Cripple Creek district with a view of adding to their holdings. The company now owns the famous Independence mine, purchased from Winfield Scott Stratton in 1899 for $10,000,000.

"Scout" engineers are now at work in the district, according to General Manager Philip J. Argall of the company. However, the Cripple Creek head of the corporation refuses to state in what properties the engineers are working. It is believed that the Independence company is desirous of obtaining several more mines which now belong to the Stratton estate.

MINE OWNERS TO ELECT OFFICERS ON JANUARY 16

Delegates from the stockholders of the Cripple Creek Mine Owners association, comprising about 30 companies in the Cripple Creek district, will attend the annual meeting of the association in Cheyenne, Wyo., January 16. The delegates were selected at a preliminary meeting of the organization held in the Mining exchange last Saturday.

At the Cheyenne meeting officers for the ensuing year will be elected and the proceedings of the preliminary meeting held here will be ratified. The association is incorporated under the laws of Wyoming and the formal annual meeting must be held in that state.

Rich Strike Made in Strong Mine; Vein Is Running $80 a Pound

A gold bearing vein, the values of which average from $70 to $80 a pound, has been uncovered on the 1,200-foot level of the Strong mine, according to word just received here from the Cripple Creek district. The vein was found in a 14-foot ore shoot broken into last week about 84 feet from the 1,200 foot station, almost under the business center of Victor.

Mining men claim the find proves that a second ore zone exists at a lower level than was anticipated before the drainage tunnel was opened. The vein is at an altitude of 8,000 feet and the zone has been struck in the Portland, Vindicator, El Paso and Elkton.

Mill Companies Claim Assessment Unjust; Ask Large Reduction

Notices of appeal from the decision of County Assessor R. J. Gwillim were filed in the district court yesterday by the Portland Gold Mining company and the Golden Cycle Gold Mining company, who claim that they were unjustly assessed in 1913. Both companies filed objections some time ago with the county assessor, claiming that the tax valuation placed on their mills was unjust. The Portland company claims that its assessment should be $200,000 instead of $575,000, as fixed by the assessor, while the Golden Cycle company claims that its assessment should have been $595,100 instead of $1,315,750.

Old-Fashioned Stage Holdup in California

YREKA, Cal., Jan. 5.—An old-fashioned stage holdup occurred today on the mountain road between Yreka and Walker. Two masked men in ragged overalls sprang out from a clump of bushes and in the approved manner "covered" the driver and ordered him down from his seat. They rifled his pockets of $45, tied his hands together and placed him inside the coach. There were no passengers and the robbers did not touch the mail sack.

Before taking to the shrubbery, the bandits started the stage horses down the mountain. The driver got his hands free, however, in time to prevent an accident. He telephoned to the sheriff here and a posse started in pursuit of the robbers.

A missionary from the Sunday school department has given her entire time during the last year to visiting the unfortunate poor and distributing food and clothing.

Works of Popular Illustrator of Life May Be Brought Here for Exhibition

The Colorado Springs Art society, which held a number of very good exhibits last winter, is making a strenuous effort to secure an exhibition of the drawings of Orson Lowell which have appeared in Life during the last two years. The club is meeting with fair success and it is thought the exhibit can be secured within the near future.

Arthur Hoeber, art critic of the Globe, New York, has the following to say of Lowell:

"The clientele of Life is an exigeant one, for it knows its social world and is a most sophisticated crowd. Few things escape its speculative mind, and woe betide the artist that slips up in his renderings. Of the many illustrators on its staff, Orson Lowell is one of the most popular, for he combines pure artistry with an abiding sense of humor. Lowell, a serious enough man in his profession, is nevertheless a keen humorist. To him humor is the breath of life. He sees things in a funny way where the average man would completely miss the drollery. It is a wonderful gift: one is born with it, or the jig is entirely up. You cannot force it; it is obliged to be spontaneous. There is not a drawing in this collection lacking that particularly quality. They all seem to have happened because the draughtsman simply couldn't help it; which, by the way, is really and truly the reason for their making. In fact, it is more or less difficult for Lowell to be serious for long at a time. I do not mean that he is frivolous, but delightful humor bubbles out of him, as Mark Twain used to say, like attar of roses out of the otter."

Each year the month of January numbers its list of victims from influenza, la grippe, bronchitis and pneumonia. La grippe coughs seriously weaken the system, and when they hang on, are a sign of general debility. Colorado's Exhibit at Fair to Be Discussed at Meeting in Springs

The question of Colorado's participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, and also the exposition at San Diego, will be taken up at the coming meeting of the Colorado Association of Commercial Executives here January 17. Effort will be made to start a movement whereby an exhibit of Colorado products at the fairs may be financed.

One of the chief speakers at the meeting will be E. L. Scholtz, a director of the Denver chamber of commerce, who recently made a special trip to San Francisco and San Diego to investigate conditions there, and ascertain the appropriation necessary for a creditable state exhibit.

A special committee has been appointed by the association to draw up plans for the financing of an exhibit, and it will report at the meeting here.

TAX LIST BEING HELD UP PENDING COURT DECISION

Certification by Assessor Depends Upon Result of Denver's Suit; Reduction Would Hurt

Assessor R. J. Gwillim has not yet certified the 1914 tax list to the county treasurer, having been directed by the state tax commission not to file his tax roll until the supreme court has passed on Denver's suit for a reduction in assessed valuation. The supreme court was expected to pass on the suit yesterday, but the decision probably will not be handed down for several days, according to advices from Denver.

If Denver's valuation is reduced, El Paso county's will be cut proportionately, according to the commissioners. This county has asked for a reduction of 20 per cent in the valuation. If any reduction is made, it is likely to throw both city and county in debt as the tax levies already have been fixed for next year and cannot be changed.

Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

Royal Baking Powder is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder and its use is more economical than other leavening agents, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Cheap baking powders, containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or advertised as pure and wholesome. Such mixtures are not desirable for food ingredients. Most persons have learned to their sorrow that a low price does not always mean economy. This is especially so in a food article. No baking powder can properly be substituted for Royal.

Read the ingredient clause on the label. If it does not show "Cream of Tartar," don't buy the powder.

What the Press Agents Say

"WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY"

"What Happened to Mary," a new comedy by Owen Davis, which was produced at the Fulton theater, New York city, [illegible] was well received by the press and public. It is a dramatization [illegible] stories that have been appearing in the Ladies' World. Whether these stories have been widely read or not, it is safe to wager that a great many people will now want to learn more about her. It is impossible to say just how much the play adds to the story but in some points at least the play has an advantage over the original. It gives a Mary whom we can see with other eyes than those of imagination, and whom we can follow with perhaps a greater interest.

"ADELE"

The plot of "Adele," the biggest musical comedy success in many seasons, which comes to the Opera [illegible] by Paul [illegible] and Jean Briquet, authors of "Alma." But Adele is quite a different sort of girl from Alma. She is a dainty young miss whose father deals in sardines and olive oils. She enters into a marriage of convenience with a young baron, Charles de Chantilly, in complete accord with the wishes of Robert [illegible]lebur, whom she loves and who loves her. Charles similarly marries Adele in accordance with the wishes of Myrianne de Neuville, whom he adores and who adores him. But the understanding is that husband and wife are to part as soon as the ceremony has been performed; that they are to be divorced, and Adele will marry Robert, leaving Charles free to become the husband of Myrianne. In this instance the [illegible] plans of the quartet are frustrated.

In the second act, which is laid at the hotel of a popular resort, where the [illegible] are quartered, Charles falls in love with Adele and Adele [illegible] and a touch of spice is [illegible] to the proceedings by the fact that [illegible] of their growing mutual [illegible] is [illegible] in the bri[illegible] on the night of the wedding. [illegible], the author has handled this situation with great discretion without spoiling the fun, when Robert, by previous agreement with Adele, keeps continually crying "Cuckoo!" "Cuckoo!" from the garden; and Myrianne, by a similar agreement with Charles, continually interrupts the love duet of husband and wife by singing the Toreador song from "Carmen," in her room beneath the bridal chamber, both as an admonition to the young couple to stick to a close observance of the proprieties and not forget the greater love temporarily ruled out of commission.

What follows is soon told: husband and wife are completely reconciled to their marriage, and Robert marries Myrianne, so that the happy ending is most judiciously insured.

JUDGE SHEAFOR RULES THAT MEN WILL BE PAID

Judge John W. Sheafor of the district court yesterday handed down a decision in a mechanic's lien suit against coal lands north of the city, now owned by Judge McGarry and associates of the Golden Cycle company. The suit involved $1,500 due for labor, left unpaid by the Industrial Fuel & Ice association. The land was leased to the Industrial association by Mark Dorr who later sold it to McGarry and associates and a mechanic's lien suit was then brought against the new owners by the laborers. Judge Sheafor decided that the land owners were liable and unless the suit is carried to a higher court, the laborers will receive their pay for work done several years ago.

[illegible] That [illegible] Reduce Expenses

By [illegible] WHIPPLE.

WASHINGTON, [illegible]—[illegible] for the [illegible] that of the entire world [illegible] high cost of living. But [illegible] of the department of agriculture, has struck upon what he claims is the real reason the cost of living is so altitudinous.

Mr. Page's [illegible] is briefly the [illegible] of the United States [illegible] such a [illegible] of [illegible] and no [illegible]. Mr. Page's position as chief of the [illegible] of public roads of the department of agriculture [illegible] to do with his theory. But he has a [illegible] of [illegible] argument [illegible] to substantiate it.

"Do you know," he [illegible] the cost of living, "that the people of the United States have it in their power to [illegible] $250,000,000 a [illegible] by [illegible] roads? [illegible] what a cut such a saving [illegible] in the cost of living. Think what it would mean to each individual budget to have a slice of this saving.

Cost of Hauling.

"If the cost of hauling in this country were [illegible] of [illegible] our [illegible], the United States [illegible] $250,000,000 a year. [illegible] the nation [illegible] another $250,000,000 to its [illegible] by [illegible] road laws and [illegible] the [illegible] for the present antiquated and wasteful [illegible] of handling our [illegible].

"Thus you see that in the [illegible] of hauling [illegible] alone, the United States has it in its power to save the $250,000,000 I spoke of. And considerably more could be added to this if the people of the nation could be brought to a realization of how much it [illegible] to the future of the country to have roads which will reflect credit upon those who made them.

"In connection with this subject, there are two or three interesting [illegible] proved by statistics in this department and the department of commerce, which the average man does not know.

"Are you aware, for example, that it costs more to deliver a pound of coffee from the [illegible] grocery store to a house a mile and a quarter away than it costs to bring that same pound of coffee all the way from Rio Janeiro to New York?

What It Costs the Farmer.

"Do you know that it costs the farmer who lives ten miles from the railroad over which he ships his products one and one-sixth cents more to haul a bushel of wheat to the freight station than it costs the buyer to ship that wheat from New York to Liverpool?

"Do you know that our average yearly bill for hauling cotton alone is [illegible] three hundred million dollars?

"No, you didn't know these things and the average man is all ignorant of them. That's the reason that the bad roads of the United States go on mulcting the citizens of this country of their hard earned money; that's the reason that to our other burdens is added that of the farmer who has to plough through axle-deep mud in order to get his perishable produce to market. If the people of the United States understood what a burden the present condition of the roads is to them, they would never rest until the cost of hauling was [illegible] reduced.

"If our farmers could only be made to realize the [illegible] tax which bad roads impose upon them, public opinion would demand the building and maintaining of good roads everywhere.

"The old idea of the toll roads that the cost of maintaining the roads should be borne by those who use them—has been shown to be [illegible]. One might as well say that the fire department should be maintained only by those who suffer from fires or that those whose homes are robbed should provide the wherewithal to support the police.

All Should Contribute.

"The burden of making and maintaining our roads should be borne by those who benefit in their improvement by all those dwelling in the United States, since everyone in the country would share in the benefits accruing from the increased commerce and the decreased expenses following [illegible]

A Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily [illegible] at [illegible] Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

"In his zeal for victory, the great end of all things as he sees it, what wonder if at times doubtful and discredited methods should seem admissible and foul mean fair! The exaggerated importance of athletic supremacy to the student mind and its effect upon student ideals is further aggravated by the hysteria of an unthinking public, and by the undue prominence accorded the contests and the individual contestants by an injudicious press.

"These considerations do not in any way lessen the difficulty of the problem to be faced by educators, but they certainly do, to my mind, emphasize the strategic importance of intercollegiate athletics as a means of training young men in those qualities of manhood and citizenship which constitute the very fibre of a nation's greatness.

"I for one do not believe that the abolition of intercollegiate contests at this time would be wise or expedient even if practicable, but I do believe that the only justification for their continuance is to be found in the fact that, by creating a widespread interest in athletic forms of exercise and by instilling into the boys and young men high standards of honor and fair play, they contribute directly and profoundly to their all-around development.

"It is a question therefore whether intercollegiate athletics have justified themselves up to this time, except in so far as they have served as an outlet for youthful exuberance and animal spirits.

"Students must be made to realize that intercollegiate athletics are not an end in themselves, but are merely incidental to the general system of physical training; that a team is selected from a large number of students who are engaged in that particular form of sport, and is given special care and attention by the instructor, with the assistance, it may be, of volunteer coaches and assistants, as representing the institution and the system of training employed and not as representing the ability of a coach or professional athletic trainer to develop a ... would ... a few athletes who have been collaled from various preparatory schools."

With the advantage in height and reach McAllister outboxed his man for two rounds, but in the third and fourth Levinsky did good work at close quarters. The fifth was even. Levinsky lost the sixth and seventh and took the offensive in the eighth and held the advantage in the ninth. In the final round McAllister outpointed him.

KNABE GOES 10 FEDS; TO MANAGE BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Jan. 5.—Otto Knabe, second baseman of the Philadelphia National league club, today signed a contract to manage the Baltimore Federal league club, for three years.

Knabe was given a large sum of money in cash as a bonus for signing. It is understood that the bonus and the three years' salary that has been promised him will amount to about $25,000. All that Knabe would say was that the money end had been arranged to his satisfaction.

Smith Confirms Purchase of Denver Western Franchise

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Edward W. Smith, sporting editor of a Chicago newspaper, tonight confirmed reports that he is negotiating for the purchase of the Denver Western league baseball club. Smith said he hoped to close the deal Wednesday when James C. McGill, owner, and Jack Hendricks, manager, of the Denver club, will arrive here from Cincinnati, where they are attending a meeting of the national commission.

A few weeks ago McGill purchased the Indianapolis American association club and announced Hendricks would manage it.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 5.—J. C. McGill, owner of the Indianapolis and Denver baseball clubs, asserted tonight that he would sell the Denver franchise to Edward W. Smith of Chicago if they can reach an agreement on terms.

"I will communicate with him tomorrow, and if he is in a purchasing mood, I have no doubt that he can become the owner of the Denver club," said McGill.

PHILS REELECT OFFICERS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5.—All the officers of the Philadelphia National league baseball club were reelected at the annual meeting held here today.

FRAT DEMANDS WILL BE ALLOWED IN PART

Commission Meeting Not Very Exciting; Results to Be Known Today

CINCINNATI, Jan. 5.—After discussing the requests of the Baseball Players fraternity, the national baseball commission and the committee from the National Association of Minor leagues adjourned tonight, ready to present a solid front when the committee of players present their case tomorrow.

No announcement of what demands had been conceded or denied was issued, but on good authority it was said that not more than four of the demands will cause any friction at tomorrow's meeting. Probably the most important announcement was that the meeting tomorrow would be an open one, the public and press being admitted.

It was said that the only request the minor leagues objected to was the one that asks that 10 days' notice be given players after their release.

There are several, however, that the majors do not approve, but what these are major league officials refused to divulge.

Previous to the joint meeting, the national commission was in session during a majority of the day. Chairman August Herrmann and Secretary John E. Bruce were reelected.

Secretary Bruce reported that the total money handled by the commission from all sources, including the world's and city series, amounted to $855,668.88. Three thousand, seven hundred and twenty-five decisions and statements were handled during the year.

The commission handed down the following minor decisions.

Player Leary, who was claimed by Birmingham, Utica and the St. Louis Americans, was awarded to the St. Louis Americans as a drafted player. Umpire Fitzsimmons' claim for salary from the Western league was refused.

Members of the commission took no action regarding the Federal league. Secretary Bruce asserted that Chairman Herrmann merely mentioned the new baseball organization in his annual report.

Announcement that Otto Knabe had signed a contract to manage the Baltimore club of the Federal league was greeted with surprise by the commission and club owners of both leagues.

The commission and a number of club owners will give a dinner tomorrow night to John K. Tener, governor of Pennsylvania, who recently was elected president of the National league.

Herrmann's statement is regarded as the answer of organized baseball to the projects of the Federal league, whose spokesmen, including President James A. Gilmore, have declared that while they will respect actual playing contracts held by national agreement clubs, they will disregard the much-discussed reserve clause, which they hold to be illegal.

Touching on the Gallagher resolution in the lower house at Washington, the report says:

"The introduction of the Gallagher resolution in the house of representatives was the forerunner to newspaper discussions of a congressional inquiry into the methods and purposes of professional baseball as operated under the national agreement. This measure, however, died in the committee to which it was referred. As there has been no agitation on this matter recently I assume that those who were behind it have concluded not to make further efforts in that direction.

"The attitude of the commission relative to this investigation was promptly and clearly defined. A thorough and impartial inquiry by congress or the federal or state courts will be welcomed by all connected with the game in full confidence that the result will demonstrate that national agreement baseball is conducted on sound business principles with due regard to the constitutional and statutory privileges and rights of all parties engaged in it."

The report states that the world's series of 1913 was conducted with a spirit of true sportsmanship, scalping was minimized and the New York club was cleared by the district attorney of that city of charges of conniving with scalpers. The Chicago city series was a success, says the report, but the Cleveland-Pittsburg series suffered lack of patronage because application for the sanction of the national commission was too long delayed resulting in a detrimental effect on publicity. The St Louis series was a failure from every standpoint. It was not played under the auspices of the commission and came to no decision because of a row on the field, Herrmann states.

Correspondence of the commission was heavier than during the preceding year, but the number of decisions required of it was smaller. Appeals from decisions of the national board increased despite the fact that the percentage of reversals in former years was small. The commission still has 2? cases under consideration.

She don't need to say nothin', Phoebe don't. She's allus pickin' up after me," he concluded aggrievedly.

A call from the kitchen told him that his dinner was ready. As Phoebe sat opposite him at the table, he mentally compared her with the type illustrated in the newspaper article. Phoebe was short and inclined to stoutness. Her hair was brown, now becoming tinged with gray, and a stranger who looked at the good-natured expression on her broad face would have said that if she possessed the "nagging" habit, one could discern surprisingly little trace of it. She certainly bore no resemblance to the skinny-throated, wolf-faced virago whom the newspaper artist had pictured.

"Not much luck today?" inquired Phoebe, as she poured him a great cup of tea. She had read his ill success in his face.

"Dollar 'n forty-five cents," he returned. "Jest pollack. No luck at all. An' thar waren't a thing in th' lobster-pots."

"The cove's fished out, I guess," she commented with a sigh.

"P'raps it is an' p'raps it ain't," he snapped in reply. "If th' bottom o' th' Cove wuz crawlin' with lobsters, they wouldn't be none in my traps. It's my luck!"

"Years ago, when they wus plenty on 'em, ye got your share," she reminded him.

"Years ago! Yes, when lobsters waren't wurth nothin'. But now, when I'm sixty-four years old, an' need every fish an' every cent, nothin' comes my way! Nothin'! Why ain't I done ez well ez other fellers that ... young when I wus? Thar's ... Bladgett ... vessels an' wharves an' more ..., an' ... stocks an' bonds fur all I know! "Ben Bladgett's made his money cheatin' every one that's run afoul on him. You know that, Micah! We can't envy him money he's made in that way!"

"Who says I envy him? What I want ter know is, why ain't I done ez well? What's kep' me from makin' money an' gettin' rich same ez others?"

"They's some ain't done ez well ez you have, Micah!"

"Don't you argy with me, Phoebe! An' don't you nag me! Don't ye do it! I've jest found out what's the matter with me! They's an infiooence in my life that's destroyed my ambition an'—an'—" Micah's memory failed him as he started this quotation from the newspaper article on domestic unhappiness.

"I ain't goin' ter stand it much longer!" he mumbled darkly, by way of finishing his sentence.

Phoebe looked at him in placid wonder.

"Ye ain't got that misery in yer stummick ag'in, hev ye, Micah?" she asked anxiously.

Micah shook his head, and sullenly left the table. Upstairs he went to his room and lay down on the bed. Below, the cheerful rattle of dishes, as Phoebe began to wash them, only served to irritate him for a few minutes, but it was not long before he dropped into his usual afternoon nap.

When he awoke, the afternoon was half gone, and the house was quiet. Phoebe, as was ..., was probably ... in her rocker ... by the kitchen window.

The awakening found Micah's spirits still depressed. If he had been a rich man he would have sought a ... he was suffering from a mild touch of melancholia. If he had been a young man with friends about him they would have said he was the victim of a "grouch," and rallied him out of it.

In truth, he was under a spell of the sort that comes over nearly every man at one time or another a fierce rebellion against things as they are, a bitter resentment against the bounds of his particular corner in the world, whether those bounds are represented by the confinements of work, or of loneliness, or the ties of family. Whatever it is that the mind in such a state seizes upon, there is the wild—sometimes overwhelming desire to break away, and to rush out and far off, for once care-free. In a man of Micah's age, such a spell may be the final flicker of an active youth long since spent, or, perhaps, a brief return of some old nomadic instinct of centuries ago.

But Micah blamed his wife.

For a time he lay staring at the cracks in the ceiling muttering now and then to himself: "I've been a failure, and I ain't goin' ter stand it no longer. 'Break away,' the paper said, 'or she'll break you.' I'm goin' ter break away! Goin' ter break away!"

He sat up and pulled on his boots. Then, softly, he made up a bundle of clean clothes. Concealed under a loose board in the bottom of the closet was a small roll of bills. This he carefully divided, shoving half the money into his pocket and leaving the remainder for Phoebe. Still softly, he stole down the front stairs and out through the seldom-used front door.

"Sho!" he exclaimed suddenly. "Here I be sneakin' off ez if I wus ter blame, an' ashamed on't. I'm jest goin' ter step back fur a minute an' tell Phoebe that I'm goin', even if it does make words. 'Break away' don't jest mean 'sneak away,' I guess."

But Phoebe, whom he had supposed to be busy in the kitchen was not there. Nor was she in the living-room, nor in the shed. The whole lower part of the house was without an occupant.

Micah considered.

"Gone berryin'." But there was no sign of his wife along the road to the west, where scattered blackberry bushes bore their dusky fruit. Then, as he stood puzzled, the fisherman, for the first time in his unusual preoccupation, noticed the sky.

"Sho!" he exclaimed again. "Lucky I didn't put off fur town a few minutes ago. So tied up in my mind I wusn't watchin' the weather and I'd have got ketched sure. That's a mighty heavy thunder-squall comin' up."

He stood and watched it for a moment. From the west, a thick gray and black bank was rapidly spreading darkness across the sky. Below, the horizon was of a solid slate-color, grim and threatening.

"Wind!" commented Micah. "Wind, and rain, too! Glad I'm ashore. Now, where in tarnation is Phoebe? Ph...!"

He called again, but there was no answer. "Ye don't s'pose," he questioned aloud, "that she minded what I ...'d this noon more'n I thought, and has gone off herself?" Jest like ... ter ... he added as if injured, and then: "She didn't need ter. I wus willin' ter leave her the house an' garden, an'—her boat's gone, sure enough!"

Phoebe's own boat, which usually bobbed at the end of a riding-line from the shore, was missing. It was a green-painted light skiff which Micah had bought her two years before, for while Phoebe could, if obliged to, row one of the heavy dories, of late years the exertion had tired her, and the skiff, which was safe enough to cross the harbor in during fair weather, was much easier to handle.

"Left me, I vow!" concluded Micah. "Gone off an' left me! Wal, if that ain't jest like a woman! I hope she's got acrost ter town all right, though. That squall comin' up—what's that?"

His eye, sweeping the prospect, had been caught by an object far out in the harbor: a little green skiff, moving rapidly with the tide toward the open ocean. In the bow of the boat, Micah could see the glint of what he recognized, even at that distance, as Phoebe's red shawl.

"What's she makin' for?" he gasped in astonishment. "Goin' out like that with a thunder-storm already gathered! Is the woman crazy? Good Lord! I know! She's lost an oar, 's tryin' ter peddle up bow, an' can't make it. The tide's takin' her out ter sea, an' th' storm — th' storm —"

With but one more glance at the now widely overcast sky, he leaped down the beach to his own dory. The oars lay in her, and with a couple of mighty sweeps Micah brought her bow around. Then, with strong, rapid strokes, he sent the boat plunging across the water in pursuit of the green skiff. As he glanced over a shoulder to lay his course, a quivering flash of white lightning pencilled the western sky, and a few seconds brought the accompanying rumble of distant thunder.

"Got ter ketch her!" growled Micah. "Got ter!" His back and arms were doing the work for which they were daily called upon, but it was a long time since he had summoned their strength for such rapid action.

"Got ter!" he repeated grimly and the dory took the waves squarely. A quickening of the "clop-clop" of the water against the boat made Micah stifle a curse with his clinched teeth. The first irregular flaws of the coming wind were chopping the waves crosswise and the dory herself seemed to lose breath for a moment as she put her head down to this additional difficulty. Micah's own breath was coming short.

"I ain't so young now!" he whispered. "Can't jest pull ez strong ez I used ter!"

He glanced over his shoulder again. The rising wind had caught the green skiff and swayed its course against the outgrowing tide. The little boat was no longer drifting toward the open ocean, but, what was more dangerous, it was now being carried toward the rock-armored shore just inside the "point," where there was no beach, and where, even in calm weather, the waves broke roughly and sucked back slobberingly and greedily.

Sweat was running in Micah's eyes, but he could dimly see that the red-shawled figure in the bow was making little headway against the combination of wind and tide.

"Bring her head around!" he shouted. "Keep her up! Oh, Lord! She can't hear me!"

He gasped, for his lungs begrudged the breath the shout had taken. The wind was coming in stronger gusts now, and the waves were growing larger.

"I got ter!" There was a pain back of his right shoulder, where rheumatism had bothered him the previous winter. Micah fought it, grimly refusing to lessen the force of his stroke, or to bear lightly with the threatened arm. Once more he turned, the green skiff and the dot of red were still between him and the rocks.

Somewhere near, a mighty flash of lightning struck and a thunder-clap crashed. A tremendous gust of wind reached the dory as Micah by instinct, whirled his head to meet it. Four rods toward the west, he was suddenly conscious of a thick wall of rain, dropped from the sky. The next moment the rain and the howling wind were all about him. Their curtain shut from his sight the rest of the world—shut out the green skiff.

Micah himself was in no danger. The dory, in capable hands, could ride out a winter gale. But there was little chance that Phoebe, in that rush of wind and water, could keep her light skiff from being overturned or swamped, even if it was not driven upon the rocks and there smashed to kindlings.

Micah, caught in the swirl of the elements, pulled desperately, heading the dory as nearly as he dared in the direction where he had last seen the green skiff. But very soon that direction became vague, and in a few minutes he was rowing aimlessly, beaten by the wind and peering desperately into the pouring rain in a vain effort to catch a glimpse of the green skiff or of some landmark to guide him. He could see nothing beyond the gray curtain.

"Oh, Lord!" he gasped. "Save Phoebe! Don't let her drown! I'm sorry about breakin' away! I must have been tetched, Lord honest! Tell her ter keep her head ter th' wind."

A cross-sea struck the dory and Micah barely righted her with three inches of water in the bottom.

"I can weather it, Lord! I'm all right. Take keer o' Phoebe! She's allus trusted You, and how can You expect a lone woman in a skiff ter ride out waves like that? Don't take her, Lord! She's all I got, an' I need her more'n You do. Jest take care on her, Lord! Tell her ter hang on ter th' boat if she capsizes, and I'll come jest ez soon ez I kin see through this pesky rain!"

Thus he raved on, rowing blindly and desperately, and praying in his despair.

Suddenly the rain fell more gently and then ceased. The waves lessened and the harbor grew almost smooth as the wind passed. Away to the east, the storm was still growling and thrashing its way.

Micah gazed toward the Point, straining his eyes to catch every bit of foam that dotted the water. Then with cold sweatdrops on his forehead and his knees trembling, he stood up. There was no visible sign of the green skiff.

With lips aquiver, but his jaws set to hold in any expression of the grief that was tearing at his soul, he sat down. Grimly, and in silence, he bailed out the boat. Then he pulled toward the Point.

Carefully searching the rocky shore, he came at last upon some floating broken boards, painted green. Near by, on a shelving rock, was caught the fragment of a red shawl. There was nothing else.

"It—it ain't come ashore yet!" he murmured. And then the horror of the impersonal pronoun as applied to what had been his wife swept over him and his shoulders shook.

Slowly he rowed back to his own landing. Doggedly and reluctantly he trudged up the well-worn path to the house. To his imagination, the approaching sunset hung gloomy shadows about every angle of the home.

On the little porch, something white caught his attention. It was the newspaper containing the article on domestic unhappiness. Viciously he tore it into pieces and thrust the crumpled fragments under the steps.

"An' I called her a naggin' woman —her!" he muttered.

Wearily he crept around the corner of the house and opened the back door. As he stepped into the kitchen there turned to face him a woman who had been bending over the stove. She was a short woman, inclined to stoutness—a woman with a broad, good-natured face.

"Phoebe!" he exclaimed, and leaned limply against the doorpost.

"Why, Micah!" she cried. "What ails ye? You're pale es a ghost, an' shakin'. Have ye got a chill?"

Micah was a New Englander to whom speech was slow and the spoken expression of unusual emotions well-nigh impossible. Tortures could not have induced him to explain.

"Nothin'," he stammered. "Nothin'. I—the skiff."

"I'm awful sorry 'bout th' skiff," Phoebe hastily explained. "It's my fault, Micah, and I guess I'll have ter go without a boat if it's lost. Ye see I was goin' over t' Gregg's ter git some corn husks, an' I put the old clothes basket ter hold 'em in th' bow o' the skiff with my red shawl ter cover it up. That's lost too.

"Jest ez I was puttin' off, young Mr. Morse druv up in their buggy an' wanted that I sh'd go right over an' see what ailed their new baby that was havin' convulsions. I druv off with him, furgettin' ter make fast my boat. The Morse baby wuz all right when we got there, an' I come back jest afore th' thunder-storm an' seen ye chasin' the skiff. I s'pose it's smashed up," she concluded, regretfully.

"Yes," returned Micah. "It's completely lost."

"Well, I can walk ter town, or use th' dory on a pinch. Why, Micah, that's the fust time in years ye've kissed me!"

"Mebbe," said Micah. "But I calc'late ter do it once in a while ... now on. I—I—it's jest ... that you an' me's gettin' on, an' we ain't got so very many years ... Phoebe!"

STRATTON'S INDEPENDENCE AFTER NEW C. C. MINES

The Daily Mining Record of Denver, quoting its correspondent in London, [illegible] a correspondent in London, England, gives publicity to the following:

"President Charles F. Rowsell announces that Stratton's Independence, Ltd., will shortly enter the market for new mines to add to its holdings in the Cripple Creek region. It is pointed out that no new ore has been opened up in the Stratton workings, and the company contemplates accumulating a surplus of 10,000 pounds to [illegible] pounds, with which to be in the [illegible] for desirable propositions.

"Very little ore has been produced at Stratton's Independence this year [illegible] the fifth level. The tenth level was recovered, cleaned out and driven to the northern boundary; considerable prospecting was done in the vein, but without discovering ore. The limits of pay ore do not extend below the 1,000-foot intermediate level, on which two leases are now working. The Stratton mill can handle $5 ore at a decent profit, and is mining $4 rock, breaking about even. It is said that on the 'A' level, where the ground is soft and no hoisting is required, $2.50 ore pays to mine and mill."

ORE AGAIN IS MOVING FROM THE EL PASO

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan 5.—Ore is again moving from the El Paso Consolidated Gold Mining company's estate on the western slope of Beacon hill, and as soon as cars are set in at the No. 1 and Nicholls shafts they will be filled out. The storm necessarily curtailed the December production from this property, but the January output will show a corresponding increase.

Superintendent Allen L. Burris has been at the mine several days and is making a careful examination of conditions, giving especially to the work now in progress at the Roosevelt Deep Drainage tunnel level, where drifts are being extended on the C. K. & N. vein north. The values obtaining are reported better than the general average grade of the ore mined in levels nearer surface.

INDEX MINE DUMP SHIPMENT LOADED OUT

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 5.—Lessees on the Index mine dump who have had a shipment ready for over two weeks were successful yesterday in securing teams to move the ore and a car to load it in. This shipment, made up of coarse rock and screenings, is estimated at better than $[illegible] to the ton.

floors of the [illegible] and tonnage is broken and unhoisted. 16 cars have been loaded and billed out since the narrow gauge line, the Golden Circle road, has been opened. Five cars were shipped on the [illegible] at the [illegible] yesterday morning and were pulled out during the day. Three cars were hauled to Cameron the first of the week by teams of the Colorado Trading and Transfer company, and this ore must necessarily be accredited to the January production, as none of the shipments reached the mills during the latter end of December.

There are at the present time in excess of a score of lessees at work and the large majority of these operators are mining ore for shipment.

PRINCE ALBERT MINE LESSEES SHIPPING AGAIN

CRIPPLE CREEK, Jan. 5.—Lessees Gaskerly and [illegible], operating on the property of the Prince Albert Gold Mining company (limited), on the southeastern slope of Beacon hill, near to the big open cut, loaded out a car of ore yesterday, the first the operators have been able to move for weeks past.

The ore shipped, without much sorting, is estimated at close to $30 to the ton.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Liverpool continues to do a good spot business on all declines, but shows no disposition to lead in an upward movement in values.

There are no special features in this morning's news and although spinners are reported as hopeful of a revival of business soon we will have to see it actually occur before we can expect higher prices.

ONLY 25 YEARS OLD

First Electric Street Car Made Trial Trip Early in 1888.

From the Worcester Times.

The street car celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday in October. It seems hardly possible that the modern street car railway system, one of the greatest developments of this electrical age, should be no older than 25 years. Yet it was in October, 1888, that the first electric street railway passenger car ever operated in this country was sent on its initial trip at Lynn, Mass., taking the present course of the Highland circuit route through several of the principal streets of the city. Trips for the first few days were made with horses, and they continued to pull the cars until the power plant wires were erected for electric power.

This was the first electrically equipped street passenger car ever run in the United States. Why the Highland section of the city was selected as an appropriate route for running this car at a rate peculiar to the present generation, but there was a reason for this. Inventors of those days were working zealously to perfect a self-propelled electric car. The Highland district, with its steep hills presented the best place for putting the latest invention to a severe test.

Machinery for the car was constructed at the Lynn works of the General Electric company, and, rather than go to the expense of trying the new invention out in some other municipality, it was deemed wise to put it to its first test in the home city. There was a sufficient number of dwellings about the Highlands at this time to guarantee paying expenses providing the car was a success.

Work of erecting the support poles and overhead wires was completed in less than two months' time and about the latter part of October, 1888, the car was sent over the Highlands for the first time under its own power. It afforded the latest curiosity of the time and hundreds of citizens, together with prominent electrical experts, turned out to witness the car run up the hill under its own power. Electricity for operating the car was supplied by a small power plant located in the basement of the old Lennox building, corner of Market street and Harrison court.

On Tuesday, September 4, 1888, an article under the heading of "Highland Street Cars" appeared in the Daily Evening Item, Lynn, as follows: "A special car, with horses attached, will be run over the tracks of the Highland electric railway, this afternoon, and Wednesday the car will begin to run regular trips, with horses, until electric wires and poles are laid."

Sure enough, the first electric car was run over the Highlands on that date, with horses attached. This car was a boxed affair and was only a few years ago, taken off the Highland route and converted into a double track car and was run on the Euclid avenue route up to a year ago, when it was replaced by the present modern conveyance on this line. The first trip of the car was made with a pair of [illegible] far as the foot of [illegible] street, where a pair of [illegible] were [illegible] up the [illegible].

"While [illegible] have been made in the [illegible] electrical car [illegible] for the [illegible] the Highland circuit electric car was first put into operation. [illegible] this invention in 1888 [illegible] have come in electric [illegible]. Previous to the operating of the first electric car on the Highlands that year, there was no such thing as an electric passenger car in operation in any part of the world.

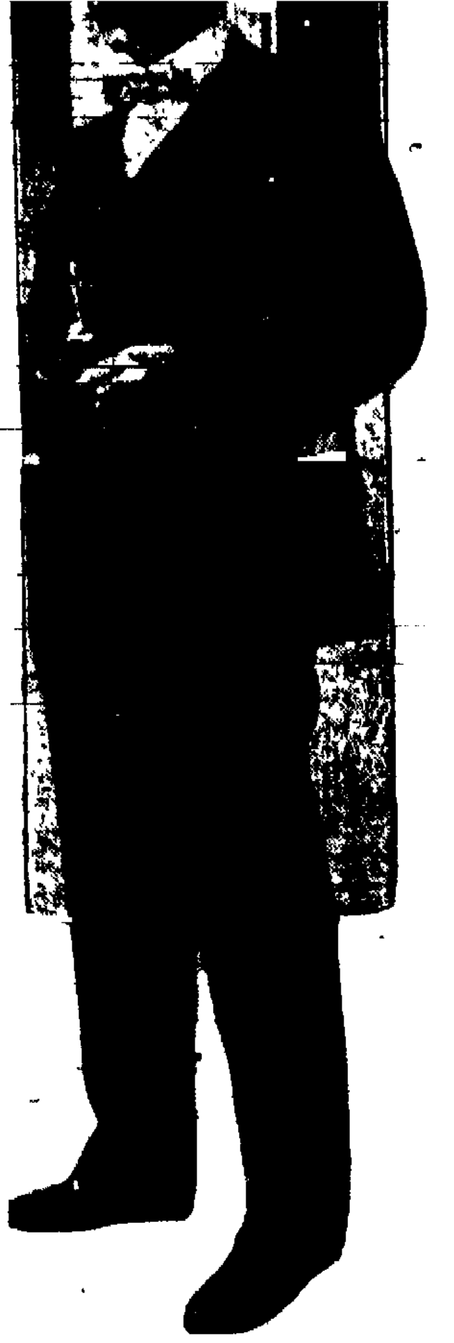
TAXES OF NATION

From the Kansas City Journal.

In an article in the American Re- views it is shown that the German is today less heavily taxed than the Eng- lishman, the Frenchman, the Ameri- can or the Italian Per capita es- timates prepared last year by the kaiser's ministry of finance are: Great Britain, 95 60 marks; France, 82.70; the United States, 80.80, Italy, 48.40; Germany, 48 17; Austria-Hungary, 41.70.

The disparity between the tax bur- dens of Germany and Great Britain is especially notable. Local taxation in the latter is two and a half times what it is in the former. British in- come taxes range from 9d to 1s in the pound, German from ¾d to ½d. The British tax upon drink (the high- est in the world) is estimated at 17s 5d per capita, the German is 4s 5d

The per capita for tobacco in Great Britain is 6s 2d, in Germany, 1s 5d According to the German minister of finance, the British inheritance tax is 19 times the per capita rate of that established in Germany in 1906



AUGUST BELMONT

Chief Game Warden Richardson of South Carolina is becoming the terror of northern fashionable folk who are sojourning on various estates for the winter. He recently came upon August Belmont and two of the traction mag- nate's guests, after they had slain two fine deer. The men were hunting on Belmont's private preserves, but the fact that they had not secured hunt- ing licenses caused Richardson to im- pose a fine of $100 on each of the of- fenders

DR. PERKINS SERIOUSLY ILL; RECOVERY DOUBTFUL

Prominent Springs Physician Has Been Unconscious for 24 Hours; Slightly Improved Last Night.

Dr. Pliny H. Perkins, one of the prominent physicians of Colorado Springs, is critically ill at St. Francis hospital, and fears are entertained for his recovery by the doctors in charge of the case. He has been unconscious since Sunday night, and yesterday morning it was feared that he would not survive the night, but a report from the hospital at a late hour last night stated that he was slightly improved.

Dr. Perkins was taken to St. Francis hospital January 1 suffering from kidney trouble. Since that time his condition has rapidly been growing worse and a consultation of surgeons was held yesterday morning at the hospital.

Dr. Perkins has been a practicing physician in Colorado Springs for many years, and has been prominently connected with the El Paso County Medical society.

"Three years isn't forever, and when I come out of prison you're going to pay for every minute of them. There won't be a day nor an hour that I don't remember that it was your word at the last that sent me to prison, and you're going to pay for that, you're going to pay me for the five years I've starved making money for you; you're going to pay me for everything I'm losing today."

Four years later Mary Turner keeps her promise and marries the son of the millionaire. And when the son tells his father he has taken the former shop girl and ex-convict as his wife, Mary triumphantly reminds the employer:

"Four years ago you took from me my name and gave me a number. Now I have lost that number and have taken your name."

The dramatic situation is perfect—all the more so because it can easily be pictured as taking place in real life. The mere reading of the words in cold type sends a thrill through one. But to hear them spoken causes a sensation that can scarcely be forgotten. And those who heard Margaret Illington speak them at the Opera house last night probably will not forget; at least the thought, if not the exact words. It may be that Jane Cowl or Helen Ware equal Miss Illington's Mary Turner. But it certainly is doubtful if they surpass her.

Has Following Here.

Already possessed of the favor of Colorado Springs theatergoers, through her acting in "Within the Law" Miss Illington has created a following here that will not soon dwindle. She has consistently and rapidly grown in skill and is now one of the really important actresses of the country. Her triumphs in "Within the Law" are not difficult to discover. She has but proved once more her claim to a high place as an emotional actress. Her power of interpretation and presentation cannot but arrest the attention of an audience. And once she has the attention she can hold it as long as she pleases.

"Within the Law" is a play which probably would stand without a star. But not without a first class cast. No strain or effort mars any of the four acts. The plot unfolds with wonderful ease; it really appears to be a chapter lifted bodily out of the life of a shop girl in any of the larger shops in the larger cities. A few incidents, it is true, may be elaborated. But it is only to lay emphasis on those which are absolutely true; only to lend force to those which are picked from records.

The tale is that of a girl employed in a big dry goods store. She is convicted of theft, although she protests her innocence. She swears vengeance on the manager who has made an example of her and thereby taken three whole years out of her life.

Released from prison, she cannot keep employment because the detectives hound her. She decides to get from society payment for that which was taken from her. She unites with a band of crooks and accumulates a fortune by clever tricks, always within the law. She has her vengeance upon Gilder, her former employer, when she marries his son. But she discovers that she really has become fond of the young man.

"Within the Law" is wonderfully well presented. Miss Illington's splendid work was upheld by an admirable cast even to the most humble part. Robert Elliot as Richard Gilder, who falls in love with Mary, was likable and convincing and Howard Gould as Edward Gilder was forceful. Frank Camp's Joe Garson was a capable piece of work, so good that when he confessed that he was a murderer and was led away to a cell he took with him the complete sympathy of his audience. The Inspector Burke of Joseph Slaytor was excellent. Mr. Slaytor portrayed the police character as pictured by the average citizen—and it was almost the real thing. The bungling methods of the self-important official were most laughable; and most true to life. Especially in the scene with Agnes, the crook girl, was he good.

And the crook girl, as pictured by Hilda Keenan, was admirable. It really was a perfect portrayal of a difficult role. Miss Keenan is charmingly pretty and possesses a delightful speaking voice. Mixing cleverness with slang—at one moment the delicate modest maiden and the next the up-to-date crook—Miss Keenan became an instant favorite. She is a most clever young woman.

Last night's audience was one of the largest of the season. But the attraction is the best that has come to Colorado Springs since Mrs. Fiske. The curtain was rolled up again and again. And after the second act Miss Illington was forced to respond to seven calls. "Within the Law" and Miss Illington scored last night and probably will make as great, if not a greater impression tonight.

U. S. SUPREME COURT GIVES SEVERAL DECISIONS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Washington's state law authorizing its cities to include within any local improvement districts state tide lands leased to private individuals on long terms was held valid today by the supreme court in the case of William P. Trimble of Seattle, who sought to have it annulled on the ground that all landlords, even states, were in duty bound to pay all taxes and assessments on leased land.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—States may tax their citizens on the par value of stocks held in corporations in other states. The supreme court so held today in the case of Truman R. Hawley of Malden, Mass., who contended his constitutional rights were infringed by such a tax.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Aliens who may have lived in the United States for years are still subject to deportation under the immigration law of 1907 should they visit their foreign homes and, within three years after returning to this country engage in immoral practices, according to a decision today by the supreme court in the case of Anna Lapina.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—That section of the Illinois inheritance tax law prohibiting safe deposit companies from transferring deposits of dead patrons to executors or administrators without retaining a sufficient portion to pay the inheritance tax was today upheld as constitutional by the supreme court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—None of the important railroad rate decisions was among those announced today by the supreme court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Clerks of state courts may collect naturalization fees but cities or counties for which they are officials can claim them. The supreme court so held today in the case of Harry I. Mulcrevy, county and city clerk of San Francisco, who contended that the city charter provision that all moneys collected by any official shall be paid into the county treasury, did not apply to naturalization fees.

Strachan's Term Expires Jan. 24; No Successor Definitely Named Yet

Unless the appointment of O. W. Ward as postmaster be ratified by President Wilson before January 24, Alex. J. Strachan, the present incumbent, may have his term lengthened until such action is taken. Postmaster Strachan's term of office ends January 24, and no definite word has been received as to the appointment of his successor. According to postal regulations the postmaster holds office until his successor qualifies.

There will be no other changes in the postoffice force when the new postmaster takes the position, as all the other offices are under civil service.

Following Congressman Seldomridge's announcement that he would name O. W. Ward as postmaster, members of the Democratic county central committee protested to Washington authorities on the grounds that the congressman had gone outside of the loyal war horses for his selection. Their protest, however, was not favorably received by Postmaster General Burleson.
